Federalist Club Hears United Nations Talks

The United Nations was the topic for discussion at the Student Federalist meeting Thursday night.

Frank Dvorshak presented an outline of the structure, the procedure of action, the accomplishments, and the failings of this international organization. He explained the voting procedure in the Security Council as well as in the General Assembly and discussed the "big power veto."

A detailed account of all the major committees and how they work was given, with special emphasis put upon the workings of UNESCO, the U N's economic, social, and cultural committee. Dvorshak pointed out that the organization was created to recognize the "sovereign equalities of nations," which are taken for granted to be "peace loving."

Weaknesses.

Dvorshak expressed the major weaknesses of the United Nations, as: 1) having no power over individuals, but only being an organization "whose members are the sovereign states" as the U N charter states, 2) having no more than the power to "make treaties with and make recommendations to member nations."

Dvorshak also pointed out that See FEDERALISTS, page 2.

Achievement Trophy Won By Sorenson

Dr. Frank E. Sorenson, associate professor of secondary education and school administration in Teachers College, has been awarded the 1946 Frank G. Brewer trophy for achievement of high distinction in the advancement of air age education for the youth of America.

The announcement came in a letter from Dr. H. W. Hurt, chairman of the trophy committee. Presentation of the award will be made at the annual aviation birthday banquet sponsored by the Aero Club, Washington, D. C., December 17.

National Recognition.

The award gives further national recognition to the air age education program developed in Nebraska schools during the past five years, according to Dr. Sorenson. "Although the award comes to me, it really is an honor bestowed upon the state departments of public instruction and aeronautics, the State Education association, the University Teachers college, and Nebraska public schools," Dr. Sorenson said. "All these agencies cooperated to give Nebraska young people the finest air age educational program in the nation."

Nebraska Plan.

The Nebraska plan was born in 1940, when the United States was in need of young pilots. At first the emphasis was laid on pre-flight work, but soon the social significance of air travel was added to the course. In geography, students were taught how the polar routes brought the rest of the world closer to us, and helped in the spreading of cultures and ideas, as well as of diseases.

Aerodynamics can be— and is—taught in physics courses, and Nebraska mathematics courses include a section of navigation. "Air age education should broaden the concept of virtually every teacher," Dr. Sorenson declared.

Experiments.

During the last five years, Nebraska educational leaders have been engaged in many aeronautical experiments to determine the best method of teaching aviation courses. These findings have been transmitted to all parts of the

Withdrawal Data Listed By Rosenlof

A smaller number of students than usual have withdrawn from the university this fall, Dr. George W. Rosenlof, Director of Admissions, disclosed Saturday. Rosenlof also indicated that a lower percentage of students had dropped than in the past.

Only 283 had left the classrooms in the entire university for all reasons up until December 7, a check of records revealed. The number included veteran's and civilian students as well.

Records show that the greatest reason given for dropping school was employment, for which 61 people left. Health and illness took 53, need at home claimed 27, 25 left for financial reasons, 22 changed schools, 22 left for "miscellaneous" reasons, 16 entered the armed forces, 13 were "dissatisfied," 11 found the work too difficult, nine were married, eight were unable to get their desired courses, four couldn't find housing, two left Lincoln, and three had unsatisfactory scholarship.
