Support . . .

It is hoped that the BOYS FROM HUSKERVILLE saw the Husker "getting nowhere in the fight for basketball success" team defeat a strong Kansas quintet Tuesday evening. It is further hoped that they are still choking on the above quoted words which they so deftly put into print in a Letterip to this paper Friday, Jan. 10.

Uncalled for, this attack served only to discredit Coach Harry Good and incite dissension among the members of the basketball team, hardly an honorable motive for such a journalistic effort.

Coach Harry Good, to most of us, does not represent a fly-by-night mentor as the anonymous author attempted to infer. As a matter of record and clarification for such "doubting Thomases" as the author, Good coached teams won 192 games between 1928 and 1943 against 52 losses, and his 1945 Indiana basketball team placed second in the Big Nine losing only three conference games. This should be substantial proof of Harry Good's coaching ability.

The team itself has tallied six wins to eight losses. Although this is not a world-shattering record, two of the six wins have been against leading Bix Six contenders.

The self-styled coach-writer penned this letter under the guise of an ardent supporter of HIS school team, yet he attempted to debase that same team. Conception of support remains individualistic should not be carried to this extremity.

Backing the team means the entire team, not certain players, and the coach is a part of the team. Support, not dissension, is the best cure for low morale.

We, as students, will help to solve this problem if we become "we won" and "we lost" supporters of all our teams and forget the "we won" and "THEY lost" routine.

Save Money With a Budget and Become a Famous Financier

By Tottie Fiddock.

If you are contributing all your coin to some unknown cause and wish to develop that Scotch habit (not the liquid kind) of saving your moola, listen to these words of wisdom. What you need is a budget.

Now to have a budget, you must first have some money. Touch your father or rob a bank or print your own—how you get it is immaterial, but you must have it to operate successfully in a financial world.

Hide It.

Having acquired a few dollars, put it in a safe place where you will be prevented from spending it right away. (Giving it to your roommate to take care of for you is NOT a good policy.) Allot yourself so much for your house bill, so much for beer, so much for coke dates, and so much for any other incidental items like stamps, gum, cigarettes, opium and arsenic to frighten your friends.

Then you must live by your budget, at least until the middle of the month. Do not spend more than you have allowed yourself, and you will be free from all money worries.

In Case of Crisis.

Of course, there comes a time in the life of every college student when the budget is not sufficient. In such an unfortunate case, it may be necessary for you to call upon the nearest loan company where you can offer your father's car as collateral in a financial crisis.

If you have a checking account, simply write a check and forget to look at the balance. This will probably be very easy to overlook, as there most likely won't be anything in the space marked "balance brought forward," and you'll be surprised how simple it is to get a little extra green stuff this way to make your budget budge.

Don't Worry.

There is no need to worry when you get a rather chilly letter from the Union or whatever place the check was passed, demanding its money immediately. Simply go to them, explain the circumstances, and promise that next time you will purchase a check book that's not made of rubber.

Whatever you do, don't be weak enough to lay aside your budget. For one thing, it makes a good impression on your father when he commences a lecture beginning "You have no sense of the value of money. Now when I was your age—" and so on.

Kreisler . . .

two movements from an older work, his String Quartet in A minor, arranged from their original four-part setting for solo violin. They are marked "Scherzo Burlesco" and "Rerospection" (Finale Reptrospectivo). A generous number of Kreisler's better-known numbers are certain to appear as encores for an audience that will surely demand them. Among them may easily be "The Old Refrain," "Liebesfreud," "Caprice Viennois," "Liebesleid," "Tambourin Chinois," and "Stars in My Eyes."

In addition to composing, Kreisler is a rabid book-reader favoring classical works of Latin and Greek and preferring among the moderns Romain Rolland, Anatole France, John Galsworthy, and Bernard Shaw.

Tickets for the Friday night recital are available at Walt's Music Store where student tickets sell for 50 cents and general admissions are from $1.20 to $3.60, reserved by section.

Chancellor, State Senator, Vet Hold Radio Forum on Budget

BY JACK HILL.

"The unicameral legislature can well afford to ask why the proposed university budget is the largest in the school's history. It is a legitimate question." With this statement, Chancellor R. G. Gustavson opened his remarks over "Vets' Views" yesterday afternoon in a forum with State Senator Harold C. Pritchard of Falls City and Carl Borton, official representative of the university veterans organization.

The chancellor pointed out to the radio audience that five years of war have created a tremendous influx of students, all with a pent-up urge for education. He remarked on the fact that the five year period had prevented building maintenance and any new buildings, in turn causing the need for more funds.

Add 204 Instructors.

An addition of 204 university instructors has been brought about since September and the proposed budget is an absolute necessity to maintaining the increased staff, the chancellor said. The staffs are not paid an extravagant salary, and the proposed appropriation is the only one which would allow the recently granted 7.8 percent increase in salaries. With a wry aside, Gustavson compared the raise with the steel formula's 18 percent and made no further comment.

Senator Pritchard, a freshman legislator and war veteran, announced that he was submitting a proposal to the unicameral which would allow for the integration of the state normal schools and the university. He stated his belief that the present administrative and organizational set-up is antiquated and uneconomical.

The first district representative was asked when such a change could be effected and he admitted that it would not be possible until the next election since such a move would take a constitutional amendment. However, he explained that statistics show American colleges will not reach their peak enrollment until 1950 and that the change could come about in ample time to do the greatest amount of good.

Griswold Cuts Request.

A discrepancy was shown in the information at the disposal of the chancellor and that supplied to the representatives when Pritchard remarked on the modest building program. In his budget speech upon retiring from office, Dwight Griswold had mentioned only two buildings while the original estimate called for 14.

Asked about the present bill now on the floor of the legislature, Pritchard said that while the bill bears little resemblance to the original requests, it will be drastically changed in committee. The bill now under discussion was based on the Griswold recommendation and does not necessarily constitute a definite commitment.

Carl Borton represented the veterans organization's view and pointed out the active part his organization has taken in attempting to insure adequate funds for the university. Borton expressed confidence that Governor Val Peterson and the state legislature will enact proper and fitting monetary allowances.

Moderated by Paul Bogen of the speech department, the program was announced by Bud Levinson, regular announcer for Vets Views, weekly program of forum and audience participation. The recorded statements will be re-broadcast over KFAB at 10:30 p. m. Saturday.
