

Farley Tells New System For Library

Beginning with the second semester, a new procedure for checking books in and out at Love Memorial library will be started, according to Richard A. Farley, circulation librarian.

All books taken from the reading rooms on the second and third floors as well as those paged from the stacks will be checked at the loan desk on second floor. Books that have been borrowed for use outside the library will be returned to this desk.

No Inspections.

Control desks inside the doors in each reading room are being eliminated. Students may pass freely from one room to another without submitting to inspection at each of the control desks. Under the new system, two new control desks will be established at the head of the central stairways. Attendants will inspect books and briefcases at these desks, but all books are to be checked out at the loan desk.

Books on two-hour reserve will be found as usual at the reserve desk in the northeast corner of the third floor and are to be checked out and returned at that desk.

Williams Holds 'Macbeth' Cast Tryouts Today
