Veterans Set Academic Standards

Veterans are setting new standards of academic performance, Gen. Omar Bradley, administrator of veterans affairs, told the Association of American Colleges at their recent meeting.

He said, "A recent study made at the University of Wisconsin indicates that veterans have made better grades than non-veterans; that the married ones have earned better marks than those single; and that the veterans with children have made the best grades of all."

High Quality

General Bradley said that veterans are demanding a higher quality of instruction. "Some of them," he added, "have expressed disappointment at the teaching they have received. I am not in a position to know whether or not their criticism is justified, but they are mature students and their opinions are worthy of consideration."

Pointing out that housing for students and faculty members is still one of the biggest headaches of college administrators, the general said, "The veteran realizes that the unprecedented enrollments have complicated the housing problem, but soon they will rightly expect something better than 'emergency housing.'"

Investment

Going to college is a serious business for the veteran, according to the director of veterans affairs. He stated, "The veteran is investing his time and money in his education. He may be postponing marriage or delaying his entry into business or the industrial world in order to obtain an

YWCA Members Will Sign Today For Commissions

A rendezvous at which students may sign up for the commission groups of the YWCA in which they are interested will take place this afternoon from 3 to 5:30 in Ellen Smith hall.

Eileen Hepperly is the general chairman of the rendezvous. The officers and cabinet members will be hostesses and will explain the functions of the various groups to those who are not familiar with them.

Miss Winifred Wygal, YW national specialist on worship and religious program will speak at 4 o'clock on "Why the Y?"

Notice to Veterans

There has been some misunderstanding on the part of a few veterans as to the obtaining of books or of non-expendable supplies more than once. May we call attention to them No. 7 on the reverse side of the purchase authorization which states, "You may not purchase on your veterans' account the same item twice." For example, a book obtained by a veteran the first semester, and used during a subsequent semester in another course, may not be obtained again. Books and non-expendable supplies that are lost, stolen, mutilated or disposed of will not be replaced at government expense.

During the rush of supplying books to several thousand students the first of the semester, it is inevitable that some veterans may have had a book or certain supplies re-issued to them. In such cases you would be doing yourself and the university a favor by returning such items to the store at once. Your veteran's account will be credited the proper amount and it will not be necessary later to ask you to return the unauthorized items. Veterans Consultation Board. J. P. Colbert, Director.

Food Bill Rise Forces Crib's Hike in Prices

The second semester rise in food prices in the Corn Crib was unavoidable, Patricia Lahr, Student Union director, explained Wednesday, because of the general rise in food costs.

Prices of sandwiches, hamburgers, malts, milkshakes, sodas, and sundaes have been raised five cents over last semester's prices.

Citing percentage increases over Nov. '45, Miss Lahr pointed out that the price of syrups, used in making malts, milkshakes and sundaes, has risen 327%, hamburger 75%, roast beef 60%, and milk 50%. "It is obvious that the Student Union would not raise prices unless forced to do so by rising costs. Against this bombardment of costs we are no longer able to hold our price line and break even," she declared.

Business Jump

Although the volume of business has increased up to 100% in some departments, this has not been sufficient to absorb the rising costs.

The Student Union food department is a non-profit organization. It is not subsidized by student fees, which go to the building fund, including maintenance, salaries, activities, insurance, and retirement of the debt on the building.

"If the cost of food drops within the next six months and the Student Union can make up its losses, we will reconsider our prices. We are not interested in becoming a commercial restaurant and want to give the student every advantage in our service," Miss Lahr said.

Five Singers

A cast of five singers, whose four or more years of college have been filled with musical activity, will take the principal roles in the school of fine arts' production of "Pagliacci" which opens its three-performance schedule tonight at 8 p. m. in Temple Theater.

The principals include baritone Cleve Genzlinger as Tonio; Richard Koupal as Canio; soprano Margaret Shelley as Nedda; baritone Dale Ganz as Silvio and Robert Rouch as Peppe. Two are graduate students, Mr. Genzlinger having received his master's degree at the mid-year commencement and Mr. Ganz being a graduate of 1940.

As an undergraduate, Genzlinger appeared in "Cavalleria

Rusticana," "Robin Hood," and as soloist three consecutive years in "The Messiah." In 1941 he sang the leading oratorio role of "Elijah" and in 1944 was auditions-winner soloist with the Lincoln Symphony orchestra upon his return from three years of army service.

Dr. Fellman Discusses State Power

The steady growth of federal power is simply a parallel to the trend toward more government at all levels, David Fellman, professor of political science, told a Nebraska Home Economics association convention Tuesday.

Addressing the convention in a meeting on the Ag campus, Professor Fellman said that, despite the trend toward more power in the national government, states are surviving as vital, important units of government.

The increase in federal power has not been at the expense of the states, he continued. Those who seek refuge in states' rights as a bulwark against national power would just as readily turn to the national government for protection against the states if the latter should seek to impose the same tax and regulatory measures, Professor Fellman pointed out.

Nationalization

Maintaining that the growth of federalism cannot be ascribed to the evil designs of power-hungry men, Professor Fellman attributed that growth to the fact that the basic elements of the American community have become nationalized. "In the measure that a nation has developed with national needs, national action has become inescapable," he told his audience.

Then Professor Fellman described the price of federalism. It has led to serious interference with the nation's economic life through the erection of troublesome trade barriers, Fellman said. "Federalism has had the result of giving the country too many laws and too many variations of laws on the same subjects. It has led to endless conflicts of jurisdiction at all levels of government," the convention was told.

Forecast at Work

However, Professor Fellman warned, "there are many forces at work in this country which, if used effectively, may set limits on centralization. For one thing, the states may and do co-operate with the national government on joint administration. Furthermore, the position of the states rests upon the great strength of the theory and tradition of decentralized government; for vigorous local government is among the oldest and most cherished traditions of the American people."
