Campus Vigilance . . .

A recent outbreak of burglaries on campus causes us to turn our attention to the university police force. During the past weeks, this staff, which is handicapped by its size, has managed to nip nearly every sign of trouble in the bud.

Although the case was given little attention in the Daily Nebraskan, we feel that the recent arrest of an acknowledged peeping-tom is an excellent sign of the vigilance the campus police demonstrate. This arrest goes hand-in-hand with the sudden cessation of activity on the part of "the man in the blue car".

Mr. John Furrow, head of the campus force, has worked in close cooperation with campus authorities and Lincoln police for many years and the low rate of misdemeanors which remain unsolved in the university area testify to the success of his work.

While much criticism has been levelled at the force in connection with faculty and student parking, this criticism cannot be justified when a look is taken at the excellent record of law enforcement the police have chalked up.

Mr. Furrow has informed the Daily Nebraskan that he is studying the campus parking situation at the present time with other officials in the hope that some satisfactory solution can be discovered. In the light of his willingness to work with the students, the Daily Nebraskan feels called upon to point out that more cooperation with Furrow and his staff might eliminate student-administration friction on problems dealing with the physical operation of the university.

Lose Your Head? See Union Lost And Found

BY WY WALKER.

Maybe you didn't know it, but in this noble institution of ours, we have a department founded for the express purpose of Aid for Poor Lost Souls . . . Namely the Lost and Found Agency in the Union.

This department has grown to such staggering proportions that the Union administration is considering hiring a caretaker and several filing clerks to take care of the refuse cast upon it! Such a move, however, would run into many complications, such as having to organize a new local of the CIO for obvious portal-to-portal reasons, that the state taxes would undoubtedly suffer a sharp rise.

Careless.

The last statement might be considered a slight exaggeration, but, believe me, the situation is worse than might be supposed. Either the intelligensia of our school spends all its time worrying about studying, or the larger percentage are so scatterbrained that minor items such as textbooks and fountain pens are never missed.

Speaking of fountain pens . . . are your fingers worn to the bone from writing without one? If so, we have an easy solution. Just go down to Lawlor's and pick out one of those new marvel jobs, come back here and describe it. It's as simple as that, really. You'll find all sizes, sorts and styles. If you can stretch your imagination, writing without a pen is all right, but otherwise, we think our idea much better.

Need a Glove?

The thing that is hard to understand is, how, when frigid temperatures like our past few days' gift from the gods, descend upon us, anyone could leave behind a pair of cheerful red earmuffs or two warm furlined gloves. And what is worse than that is the Case of the Missing Glove. There are so many mismatched gloves residing there that they've gotten together to start a legal divorce court and marriage bureau. After all, gloves might get lonely too.

But the glasses . . . yes, the glasses. That Lost and Found drawer is an optometrist's delight. If every pair of spectacles which have wandered there have been replaced, why, every eye doctor in the city should have been required to a country estate by this time. There are weak glasses, strong glasses, big glasses and small glasses, red, white, blue and black glasses . . . step right up, oh aching-eyed ones, and claim yours. Well anyhow, perhaps that accounts for the jam of humanity stationed outside the north door of Sosh between classes. Some misguided individual has probably mistaken the building for Avery and can't quite figure where the test tubes have disappeared.

Why Not Look?

Yes, one can discover most anything in the drawer labeled Lost and Found. Just in case you've lost something why not give it a try? If that coke date left you so flustered that you walked away from the Crib leaving behind a week's supply of cigarettes or your house dues for the month, you may find your problem solved by simply inquiring from the girl at the check stand.

It's not unlikely that the frustrated soul, who's been yelling himself hoarse all over the country for the past two weeks might even find Richard, or at least a skeleton key there. In fact, I've nearly decided that the Lost and Found drawer is Kilroy's permanent home . . . and I'm so convinced that I'm gonna go see right now . . . one never knows . . .

Moodie Announces Board Appointees For Ag Meeting

Four agriculturalists have been appointed to confer with the university's advancement committee, Robert R. Moodie, committee chairman, announced Friday.

Appointees are: Neal Barbour, Scottsbluff; Harry Pumphrey, Wisner; Harry Minor, Hyannis; and Ted Robinson, Waterloo. Each is a specialist in a different phase of agriculture.

Created last spring by the University Alumni association, the committee is intended to disseminate information about the university to people out state and to pass on any criticisms or suggestions concerning the university that they may hear.

"The committee felt that, since Nebraska is primarily an agricultural state, it would be well to have the counsel of the leaders of that industry," Moodie explained.

Representing four separate districts in the state, the four men will attend all committee meetings, the chairman stated.

All Innocents are requested to be at a meeting at 10:00 Monday evening.
