Council Revokes Registration Plan

Laird Announces Independent Filings for Student Candidates

BY DAKE NOVOTNY.

Never a dull moment in the political sphere on the university campus!

Student political party registration previously scheduled to be held today and Wednesday under the auspices of the Student Council has been cancelled, Helen Laird, Council president, disclosed late yesterday afternoon.

Registration has always been held by the Council in order to "guarantee an unbiased and entirely legal procedure by which students were able to register their respective party affiliations prior to regular elections. This practice, however, was adopted during the existence of more than one party, and at the present time only one, the Cornhusker party, apparently exists. Consequently the Council had but one alternative . . . to cancel the registration," Miss Laird stated.

In view of the fact that there will be no registration, all student candidates must file as independents in the forthcoming elections unless the Cornhusker party chooses to hold its own registration. In that event, the Cornhusker party may file candidates as such.

Seemingly two student political organizations have fallen by the wayside. The Union Independent and Student parties, heretofore the political greats on the campus, have retired to obscurity, a possible indication of waning student interest.

Morrill Exhibit Offers Variety Of Art Trends

By Sue Golden

Surprising variations on old themes and media are evident in the Nebraska Art association's 57th Annual exhibition of Contemporary Art, now open at the university Art galleries in Morrill hall.

Two hundred and twenty-five drawings, paintings and sculpture from all major contemporary schools and techniques are included, and for the first time, work from California and the Chicago vicinity is being shown.

Up-to-Date

More than one-fourth of the approximately 190 exhibitors are new to the exhibit. "That in itself is an indication that the association is keeping pace with new developments in art," Dwight Kirsch, chairman of the university art department and NAA, stated.

Fantasy themes are more prominent than they have been in the past, but are still outnumbered by marine and genre paintings. Abstractions are fewer, but of higher quality, Kirsch said.

Portraits are also increasing in number, and this year almost as many are shown as are landscapes, which have always been fairly strong.

Guston

Outstanding in the exhibition is Philip Guston's 1945 first prize winner at the Carnegie's Annual, an oil called "Sentimental Moment."
