prom, Saturday, March 17, from 11 to midnight.

Spotlighting the voice of Dorothy Collins, the band is at Manhattan after a 17-week engagement at the Hotel Sherman's College Inn in Chicago.

A composer as well as band-leader, Scott began his career in 1933 as CBS staff pianist, later worked with Andre Kostelanetz, Freddie Rich and other conductors.

With his Raymond Scott Quintette, organized in 1937, he went to Hollywood and appeared in a number of films. Returning to New York the next year, the quinand Decca. After finishing "Lute Song," a musical starring Mary Martin produced on Broadway in 1945, he went on tour again early last year.

Scott's compositions include "In An Eighteenth Century Drawing Room," "Do You Pamper Your Husband at Night?" "Enchanted Forest," "Huckleberry Duck" and "Birdseed Special."

Many of Scott's 1938 compositions are what is now termed "Re Bop" music.

Closing the university's official formal season, the prom will be from 9 to 12 at the coliseum, and is open to all university students. Tickets, $3 a couple, may be purchased from Masquers or at a booth in the Union.

Chancellor Issues Suspension Rule

Drunken Drivers Will Be Dropped

"I am deeply concerned over the increasing use of intoxicating liquors among our students, resulting in bad citizenship," said Chancellor R. G. Gustavson in an open letter to the student body released yesterday.

The Chancellor continued his statement to the student body, released yesterday, by saying that the university will strictly enforce its policy of suspending from the university all students found guilty of driving while under the influence of alcohol.

This restatement of a long-standing university regulation was brought about by the dismissal of a student this week who had been arrested by the Lincoln police on a charge of drunken driving. The Chancellor remarked that "in the last few days the police department of the city of Lincoln has arrested and fined several students for driving recklessly under the influence of alcohol."

Recent Accidents.

While not mentioned in the Chancellor's letter to the student body, some sources believe that recent serious automobile accidents involving university students may also have had effect on the statement.

Not necessarily heralding a sharp rise in such cases, the university clamp-down was explained by the Chancellor as demonstrating that "the university has a definite responsibility to see to it See GUSTAVSON, page 2.

Concert Features Stylized Sanroma Piano Numbers

BY SAM WARREN.

The Lincoln Symphony orchestra, presenting pianist Jesus-Maria Sanroma as an added attraction, in its second appearance of the season gave one of its most enjoyable performances to date, though lacking in the weight that the orchestra is capable of.

Opening with Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" overture, which progressed amiably enough, the orchestra moved quickly into the meatiest selection of the evening, Rachmaninoff's "Piano Concerto No. 2." With Sanroma at the keyboard, the thematic ideas of the concerto were well projected, although the limits of romanticism were never reached, and complete accuracy never attained on the part of the soloist.

It was in the slow movement that Sanroma's playing was most memorable. Here the piano line is like an extended song, Oriental in coloring, which is played above muted strings. Sustained and lovely, the adagio ended only after an exacting cadenza which displayed Sanroma's control.

In the fast-moving third movement, his tone was at time over- See CONCERT, Page 3.
