Letterip

To the Editor:

The housing conditions on this campus are a great problem; however, the housing situation here is more acute for members of minority groups. Up-to-date, the International House is the only organized house which is open to all groups. The "I" House accommodates about thirty-four people.

The policy approved by the Board of Regents concerning Women's Dormitory of occupancy in session June 17, 1944, is as follows:

"(1) The University should provide and operate an international house open to women students of any race or color whenever there may be as many applicants (sixteen) for residence in such a house as are necessary for it to be operated without financial loss either on the co-operative basis or as a dormitory furnishing both room and board without service obligations on the part of the resident as may be determined by the office of the Dean of Women (in light of the desires of applicants) with approval of the Board of Regents."

"(2) The University should provide and operate dormitory facilities for the exclusive use of any group of women of the same race whenever there may be as many applicants (sixteen) for residence in such a dormitory as are necessary for it to be operated without financial loss either on the cooperative basis or as a dormitory furnishing both room and board without service obligations on the part of the resident as may be determined by the office of the Dean of Women (in light of the desires of the applicant) with approval of the Board of Regents."

Is this a democratic policy?

"(3) The requirement that freshmen women shall reside in University residence halls should not apply to students of other than the white race until and unless the University may operate an international house and a house exclusively for the race of the concerned."

Since the University (including the dormitory) is a tax supported institution, and all groups of the state pay this tax, the University and the dormitory are paid for by all. Therefore, is it not plausible that all should reap the benefits?

Sincerely,
DOROTHY LASHER,
RUTH NORMAN,
BETTY PATRICK.

B. Harrington Named Model "Ulsterman"

Bob Harrington, freshman in Teachers college was named Nebraska's "Most Typical Irishman" in a contest sponsored by the Chesterfield Cigarette company, it was announced yesterday.

Harrington, whose grandparents came from county Trolley, Ireland, celebrated his birthday yesterday to coincide with St. Patrick's Day. He will be presented with a carton of Chesterfields by Jack Hill, Chesterfield campus representative.

Contest Close.

In a close contest, Michael Patrick Byrne, sophomore in arts and sciences was named Nebraska's second Most Typical Irishman. Byrnes' mother came from County Kilkenny and his father came from County Curlew. Before his entry into the navy, Byrne played a fife in the Cleveland, Ohio, Sons and Daughters of Erin, an Irish organization. Byrne will also be presented with a carton of Chesterfields, Hill said.

The campus representative went on to say that this contest is the first in a number of such promotional ideas which will be sponsored by the Chesterfield company in a national effort to familiarize more students with the cigarette which was proved to be most popular in a countrywide survey.

"Henry V" Ducats Priced Low; Special To Students

University students will be able to see the technicolor production of William Shakespeare's "Henry V" at a reduced price of one dollar.

Reservation coupons for the picture which will run for one week starting Thursday at the Nebraska theater are available to all students, and may be obtained without cost at both city and Ag campus Unions. These coupons are to be taken to the Nebraska theater where they can be exchanged for reservations for either a day or evening performance at the student price.

"Henry V" began as an idea in 1937, when the actor was appearing in a stage version of the play at London's famed "Old Vic" theater.

Many players have bewailed the inability, owing to the physical shortcoming of the theater, of offering a truly impressive presentation of "Henry V," but Olivier, the picture's producer-director-actor, was the first who decided to do something about it. He had appeared in a number of motion pictures and realized that the camera medium alone could provide the background for the broad and stirring scenes conjured up by the Bard.

The production, it was agreed, had to be in technicolor to represent fully the colorful period. The production staff was even more emphatic that this presentation of "Henry V" should be in the best Globe theater tradition, using the camera to re-establish the spirit of the most famous playhouse in the history of the English-speaking theater.

It was decided to present the play as it was offered at the playhouse in 1600, moving the camera outside the confines of the theater only when the action demanded more space than the playhouse provided.

The shifting of the camera from the stage of the Globe was not made arbitrarily. Each and every shift is made at the instigation of the playwright on the occasions when he complains, in the play, that he cannot adequately set the scene.

"Work, work your thoughts, and therein see a siege," says the Bard, knowing that the magnitude of a siege defied presentation within a theater's walls.

It is these shortcomings of the legitimate theater that the motion picture version of "Henry V" overcomes.

How Far Can They Go?

Women's participation in extra-curricular activities on the campus may suffer a severe blow as coeds who suddenly find themselves over-pointed have to drop an activity, according to the recent revision of the point system set up by the AWS Board.

The suggested scale was announced last fall so that organizations would have the information before they elected officers this spring. However, the proposed changes caused no comment last fall and no opportunity for such comment was offered. Consequently, the recent announcement came as a shock to some coeds.

No good reason for the switch was given then or has been announced now. The purpose is undoubtedly to see that a few people do not manage several activities, but it may turn out that only a few coeds will venture into activities, knowing that if they work in several and like them, they will have to drop them if they are elected to a presidency. It is obvious, also, that holding one of the "A" positions involves a lot of work and such a position needs time given to it.

But limiting a coed's participation to one activity limits her view-point. All extra curricular activities in college are for the experience and practice which we get out of them. If a person, man or woman, has the ability to get an "A" office in college, he probably will not limit his activities in community life to one, and he should not. There is need for some control, of course, because one individual can only handle a certain amount of work, but a person who holds an office in one organization can help a great deal in others, in college or in the community.

The function of the AWS board is to execute the will of the women students. If it is the desire of the coeds to have their activities limited by the revised point system in effect, that is fine. We wonder, though, if it is the will and how it was determined.
