Mr. and Mrs. Fred Putney announced the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Louise, to Hugh LaMaster, son of Mrs. Hugh LaMaster. Miss Putney was graduated from the University of Nebraska college of fine arts in 1946 where she was a member of Palladian, Delta Phi Delta, and Alpha Rho Tau. She is now employed in Omaha as a commercial artist. Mr. LaMaster is attending the University of Nebraska. The wedding will take place in early June.

Robert's second but feeble offer and leaves, declaring, "I'll marry an orphan!" Her first scenes were characterized by too much antagonism to the woman who would have been her mother-in-law. Although she had reason to feel bitterly resentful toward Mrs. Phelps even before the engagement was broken, her method, it would seem, would be more to beseech than to nag, as the girl who is to marry Mrs. Phelps' son.

The intensity of the play increased steadily throughout the production so that there was no let down until the final curtain had fallen, with the highest peak reached when Christina tells Mrs. Phelps just what she actually is. Miss Novotny was at her best here, with just the burning look in her eyes to reveal her inward, enraged feelings.

The play was directed by Miss Margaret Servine, with Gertrude Page as assistant director.

Chewin' the Rag

In a recent article from the Associated College Press, the following excerpt appeared:

"The Washington States' 'Evergreen' suggests that the next time your professor mentions how busy he is, remind him of the duties of a school teacher in 1661. At that time they acted as court messengers, served summonses, conducted ceremonial services at the church, led the Sunday choir, rang the bell for public worship, dug the graves, took charge of the school and performed numerous occasional duties. And not only that, but Adam Roelandson, one of the first school teachers in the colonies, took in washing on the side."

It seems that a teacher in those days did just about everything that there was to be done. But do our instructors take in washing? Not that we know about. They don't dig graves either, we hope. Then what do they do?

They try to teach us facts that they have spent many years of hard work acquiring. We have, among our faculty, men and women who are recognized authorities throuth the nation; men and women who, let's face it, are doing us a favor by remaining here at the university of the "White Spot of the Nation."

IF THEY WERE TO BECOME BELL RINGERS, LAUNDRYMEN, OR GRAVE DIGGERS, THEY WOULD UNDOUBTEDLY MAKE MORE MONEY THAN THEY ARE IN THEIR PRESENT CAPACITIES.

But perhaps the professors have heard "the call" to teach, and consider the salary as an incidental? We doubt, however, that the families of such idealists can live very comfortably on the meager "incidentals" that the state pays!

Some few of our instructors are not what they should be. This is to be expected for several reasons. Many of the better teachers refuse to work for a small wage, for which we cannot blame them. They go elsewhere, and those whose qualifications will not allow them to teach in many higher-paying institutions, come

Don L. Love's Financial Aid Advances Building Program

Don L. Love, one of Lincoln's most outstanding citizens, was known for his thrift and knowledge in business and for his generosity.

On September 12, 1940, the citizens of the Capital City were surprised when they read in their evening newspapers the following quotation: "Don L. Love, 77, former mayor, who donated great sums to Nebraska's educational institutions and hospitals of late years, died early Thursday morning after an illness of nearly two years."

Love's Background

Even the residents of Lincoln, who have benefited from his donations, did not know his background. Love was born in Jamesville, Wisconsin, educated in Des Moines, Iowa, practiced law in Garden City, Kansas, and finally became a business executive in Lincoln. He organized two banks and one insurance company.

His activities in city politics were responsible for his election to mayor on two occasions and in 1920 he was delegate-at-large to the republican national convention in Chicago.

Supplemented Appropriation

It seems strange that one who grew to manhood in other states should leave so much to Nebraska and Nebraskans. He gave $55,000 to supplement a WPA appropriation to finish the Residence Hall for Women, better known as the "Dorm".

He was responsible for the erection of the Love Industrial building at Union College and gave great amounts of money for the building of hospitals in the city and for several buildings on the agricultural college campus. His greatest memorial is the Don L. Love library.

It is unusual for a man to leave great sums of money to a foster city and to a university which he never attended. He gave to Nebraska because he found that its inhabitants fulfilled his ideals of how people should act. His donations were given in appreciation of friendliness and honesty.
