

Rosenlof, Chisholm To Assist In Occupational Ed. Problems

Two university staff members have been invited by the war department to assist U. S. armed forces with educational occupation problems in Germany and Japan.

Dr. George W. Rosenlof, director of admissions, was asked to inspect all schools established by the U. S. for dependents of armed forces personnel stationed in Germany, to evaluate the teaching program and make recommendations governing accreditation of courses provided.

Dr. Leslie L. Chisholm of Teachers college has been asked to serve on the staff of General Mac Arthur's headquarters in Japan and School Finance office. The post has been created to formulate plans and policies for re-organizing educational finance in Japan, and to prepare a long range program of financial support for all types of schools in a democratic system of public administration.

Formal Grad Miscellany Now on Sale

Formal graduation announcements, name cards, and announcement folders go on sale today for a limited time at campus book stores, it has been announced. Seniors may place orders either at Co-op or Nebraska book stores.

This year, the folders, which list names of the entire graduating class, will be bound in red leather, available to manufacturers now for the first time since the war. Before the war, red suede was used. Folders will be available in heavy white cardboard as well.

Personal calling cards, which seniors will place inside their announcements, are available in three styles: engraving, Coffer-craft raised printing, and simple printing. The Green company of Kansas City is supplying all orders.

Stressing the fact that sales are for a limited time only, seniors in charge of arrangements urge students to place their orders early.

State Museum Initiates Work On Excavations

Preliminary excavation work of fossilized remains of pre-historic animals at reservoir sites in the Republican river valley has been started by the university state museum.

Allen Graffham, a member of the museum's field staff, is working in co-operation with the Army Engineers and the Bureau of Reclamation at three sites: Harlan county dam at Republican City, Medicine Creek project at Cambridge and Enders dam on Frenchman Creek.

Evidence of valuable fossils was found during reconnaissance work last summer, according to Dr. C. B. Schultz, museum director, and fossils will be removed before the areas are inundated.

Eleven emergency classroom buildings will soon go under construction at various sites on campus, L. F. Seaton, operating superintendent, announced today.

The buildings will be constructed of wood, barracks fashion, Seaton stated, and are made available thru funds

'Pygmalion' Cast Named By Director

Cast members for "Pygmalion," the University Theatre's last production of the year, have been announced by Clarence Flick, director of the show. Playing the leads in George Bernard Shaw's five act comedy-romance are Margaret Huff, as Eliza Doolittle, and Dean Graunke, as Henry Higgins, a professor of phonetics who makes a wager that he can pass off as duchess a cockney wail (Eliza) from Drury Lane.

Characters.

Eliza's father, Alfred Doolittle, will be played by Rex Coslor. Donald Hall will play the part of Colonel Pickering, an elderly phonetician. Barbara Jean Olson has the role of Mrs. Higgins, Henry's mother, and Robert Cappel, the part of Freddy Eynsford Hill, who falls in love with Eliza.

Two bystanders will be played by Merle Stalder and Herb Spence. Others in the cast are Gladys Jackson, as Mrs. Pearce; D. Ann Richardson, Mrs. Eynsford Hill; Beverly Cummins, Miss Eynsford Hill; and Helen Plasters, a parlor maid.

Miss Plasters is the assistant director for "Pygmalion." Production dates are April 14, 15, 16 and 17.

released by the national government. All eleven are temporary, he stressed, and will come down when permanent classroom buildings can be built. The great number of students which swelled beyond the capacity of existing classroom buildings necessitated the emergency construction. When and if the Nebraska legislature passes the Mueller appropriations bill, permanent classroom building construction can get under way, Seaton said.

Student Health Building.

Four buildings, one of them designed to house the student health department, are now under construction on the quadrangle. Work was begun during spring vacation.

Other emergency wooden classroom buildings are scheduled to be constructed the following locations: One at Brace laboratory, one at teachers' college, one at the former museum on 12th street, and four at the Bancroft school. Construction will be completed by July.

Refurbish Love Library.

The derrick in front of Love Memorial library is being used to hoist up materials for the finishing of the fourth floor, which has never been opened. When the library was completed in 1941, it was turned over at once to the army for use as a barracks for A.S.T.P. students. When the training program was discontinued in 1945 and the trainees moved out, the interior was adapted to house stacks and reading rooms. The fourth floor has not until now been furnished for library use.

Seaton said that other campus beautification include placing of shrubs and sod around teachers' college.

Student Cooperation Asked In Campus Landscape Plan

BY SAM WARREN, Special Features Editor.

It's here again! It's name is "Campus Beautification."

That well-known phrase has, from time to time, prompted various quarters from the administration down to complaining students to clamor for more planned landscaping, more grass-covered lawns—or some at all, let alone more!

For the first time, the administration's maintenance and upkeep department along with a student service organization is enlisting the co-operation of all students in its campaign to beautify the campus thru a definite landscaping program.

Obstacles.

In past years, four obstacles have delayed university attempts to beautify its campus with living greenery. The first stumbling block was the depression of '29 that made funds unavailable. The second drawback was the parched drouth years that refused encouragement to any growth. Third was the war-time scarcity of labor, once conditions were favorable. And fourth has always been the difficulty of securing student cooperation, despite student demands for landscaping.

Today, according to campus upkeep head C. G. Billings, three of the four vital factors are at hand: sufficient funds, favorable conditions and adequate labor. Only the fourth, student cooperation, remains in question.

"Keep Off."

In an effort to secure that student cooperation, Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity will initiate the campaign by placing over the campus 200 placards bearing slogan reminders. In effect glorified "keep off the grass" signs, the placards will be placed
