Personally Speaking

By Norm Leger

As Ivy Day draws nearer the junior women's and men's finger nails grow shorter, and plans are laid simultaneously for glorious celebrations or trips to the wail-

Chapin, president of the senior class, to see that this year's ivy is given a decent start, so that it may thrive in grandeur—until it is dug up late Saturday evening.

DAKE NOVOTNY.

ing wall. This sort of thing has been expressed in years before much better than we can do it. Like Alan Jacobs, in his "Eleanor'n Me" column of a few years back.

Ivy Day, oh, Ivy Day,
Tradition long revered
Happy day or gloomy day,
Day of customs weird,
Ivy Day, oh, Ivy Day,
Long revered tradition,
Day of joy, day of tears,
Day of coalition.

That last line is provocative of some interesting comment, but we'll restrain ourself until the BIG day is over.

Right now we want to say a word about a couple of campus figures who preside over the two classes which include the people who are most concerned with Ivy Day activities, the juniors and seniors. The outward appearance of that concern takes two extreme forms, year after year; anxiety and hair tearing on the part of the juniors and a far too natural calmness and "know all" attitude on the part of the seniors. But tomorrow's "ins" and "outs" will be indistinguishable Saturday night: Out to rejoice in victory or to drown their sorrows of defeat. Save us a booth in a far corner, and we'll join you—either to pat you on the back or offer you a shoulder to weep on.

Jr. Prexy.

Back to the subject at hand. As the junior class spresident, Dake Novotny (whose smiling face is here before you) will prove his ability as an ivy planter. After many weeks of study and diligent practice, Dake will join his fellow ivy planter, Don

DON CHAPIN.

In addition to his junior class presidential duty of planting the ivy, Dake presides over the Student Union board, is a managing editor for the Daily Nebraskan, a past member of the student council and a member of the 1947 Junior-Senior prom committee.

Chapin.

Don Chapin, who is to be found in numerous pictures in last year's Cornhusker, we discovered, is a past member of the AUF advisory board, the interfraternity council and has been president of Sigma Nu fraternity. He also worked on the Awgwan staff.

Ivy day ivy planters, we wish you good luck, and may Calliope (the muse of music) prevent the band from succumbing to the urge to strike up an old, catchy and insipid tune, "Mairsy Doats."

Retraction

We wish to retract the statement made in Thursday's Daily Nebraskan saying, "pre-law students are required to attend Phi Alpha Delta smoker." This should have read, "Pre-law students are invited to attend Phi Alpha Delta law fraternity smoker." The Daily Nebraskan regrets that this mistake was made.

Heavy Weekend . . .

Traditions are returning full-fledged this week-end with a heavy schedule of activities in store.

The pomp and splendor of Ivy Day, with royalty in the person of the 1947 May Queen presiding over the festivities, specializes in honoring outstanding coeds and men, especially juniors. For weeks and months any junior student who has ventured into activities has been smiling harder and working faster in preparation for tomorrow afternoon.

All the ceremonies of Ivy Day which have been preserved and added to for 45 years are essentially what makes it one of the most outstanding days in a school year, however. Homecoming in the fall is the only other occasion which approaches Ivy Day in the richness of university tradition. Ivy Day is a fitting climax to a year's activities.

Engineer's Week, which returns this year for the first time since the war, occupies the spotlight today with a convocation this morning, Field Day this afternoon and a dinner dance tonight. Only one event is missing from this schedule—the fight between the engineers and lawyers.

Weekends like this revive interest in the university which has lagged a bit because of spring weather and prospects of finals. We advise enjoying the spectacle of Ivy Day tomorrow with nothing else on your minds.

Bulletin

The Comenius Club will meet Saturday at 8 p. m. in Room 24 of the Temple. All Czech students and friends may attend.

Student Help.

Student help is need for work in the Stadium. Those interested should report to Walt Renter or Floyd Bottorf, equipment man, at the field house.

Correction.

In the Vets Views of May 1 it was reported that a veteran and wife with son can claim double dependency and collect $180 a month. This statement is true with the reservation that the wife must be a vet too.

University Episcopal Church.

Services at the University Episcopal Church, located at 13th and

R Sts., will be held Sunday morning at 8:30 and 11:00.

CLASSES DISMISSED.

Dr. G. W. Rosenlof, registrar, announced today that all Saturday classes will be dismissed to enable students to participate in and observe the annual Ivy Day festivities.

Presbyterian Students.

Sunday afternoon, May 4, all Presbyterian young people are invited to attend the Presbytery Westminster Fellowship Rally at the Westminster church at 3:15. Transportation will be furnished from the Student House at 3. The main speaker of the rally will be Dr. Arthur Miller. Following Dr. Miller's talk, discussion groups will be held. Supper will be served at 6, and a short evening program will follow. Everyone is urged to attend for an afternoon of inspiration and fellowship.
