

'Claudia' To Be Presented By Actors' Lab Students

By Norm Leger

Rose Franken's "Claudia" will be presented tonight in the Temple theater at 7:30 p. m. as the second of three productions being given by the Actor's Lab, an educational medium for university students who are enrolled in classes of Acting and Directing. The story of the play, as explained by Betty Schultz, who plays the title role, revolves around a "mentally immature woman who grows up through the realization that she must meet life on its own terms... a realization, brought in great part, by the discovery that her mother has a very short time to live."

Sage as David

Claudia is married to David (Al Sage), a promising young architect. Living on a farm outside of New York, they have made the place attractive and have hired a middle aged couple as caretakers. The caretakers, Bertha and Fritz, are played by June Gast and William Reuter.

Mrs. Brown, Claudia's mother, is played by Lorna Bullock. Mrs. Brown is a gentle woman, with an unexpected dash of humor, and a code of robust contempt, who is no more happy over the state of affairs—Claudia's immaturity—than is David.

Jerry Seymour, played by Bill Wiseman, is a young British author who drops into the David and Claudia Naughton household one day quite unexpectedly, and who is amused and slightly perplexed by Claudia's boldness, a pose brought about by her husband's complete lack of jealousy and failure to recognize that Claudia has any sex appeal.

Cast.

It is Claudia's discovery that she is to become a mother followed by the realization of her mother's failing condition that makes Claudia acquiesce to the demands that living makes upon her.

Frances White plays the part of Julia Naughton, a friend of Claudia, who introduces Madame Daruschka (Lorene Novotny), a successful opera star, to the Naughton family. A good deal of robust humor is supplied by Madame Daruschka, who is given to sudden impulses of clowning, a little like an "overgrown Newfoundland dog," as the authoress describes her.

"Claudia" is directed by Blanche Duckworth and Rex Coslor.

Criminologist Makes Clear News Report

Prof. James Reinhardt, social psychologist and criminologist, has corrected the statements said to have been made by him in yesterday's Daily Nebraskan.

Inaccurately quoted as saying that it was the upper crust who were the war-makers, Prof. Reinhardt reports that his statement made at the regional conference of UNESCO was against the proposal that "radio and press news be slanted to the common people rather than to the upper crust."

Reinhardt's opposition was made in two steps: that the news not be slanted toward anyone, that the press and radio release news as it is, that all the people should be educated to news printed as facts; and that the common people are not alone in their need for education, that it is sometimes the ideals of the upper crust that are misdirected and guide us in the ways of war and peace.

Board Turns Down Humor Mag Appeal

An appeal to the Publications board for the restoration of a university humor magazine met with defeat yesterday because no proof was submitted that there is a definite campus interest in a publication of this type.

A committee composed of Joan Fankhauser, John Slothower and Jerry Johnston submitted a dummy magazine to the board for approval. The plan was to include a representation of the entire campus thru pictures, articles and creative writing in the form of short stories, poems and humorous essays.

To Circulate Petition.

Since the Board vetoed the proposal, the committee has decided to turn to the student body for backing. A petition will be circulated thruout the organized houses, co-ops and dorms. For students living in Lincoln a petition will be posted in the Daily Nebraskan office.

The petition is to be used only to prove to the Board that students want a college magazine returned to the campus and the persons signing it will not be under any obligation to subscribe to the magazine.

Workers Needed.

Any students interested in submitting material to be used in the publication may contact any of the three committee members. Persons interested in working on the business staff may also submit their names to the committee.

Student Council To Appoint Union Board Members

Voting on the candidates was postponed from last week's session when a majority of Council members felt that they needed a wider acquaintance with the candidates. The six, whose scholastic ability has been approved by deans' offices, are Donna Alfrey, Marjory Anthony, Robert Easter, Jeanne Kerrigae, Norman Leger and Sanford Lerner.

Corn Cobs Select 45 New Pledges

Munter Explains Purpose, Aim, History of Pep Group

Corn Cobs, at a smoker, last night, chose 45 men to become pledges to the pep and service group for next year. Customarily chosen in the fall, workers were selected in the spring for the first time this year so that the extensive football-season service projects may be organized when university opens in the fall.

Duane Munter, newly-elected president, presided and welcomed the pledge prospects to the group, explaining the purposes and aims of Corn Cobs, and reciting the history of the pep group, a charter member of Pi Epsilon Pi national pep fraternity. Prof. C. J. Frankforter, who has served as sponsor for the past nine years, also spoke.

Harter's compositions include two songs and a suite for piano, while Hatch's numbers three piano preludes and his first string quartet.

Nebraska People to Make Effort to Establish Peace

Nebraska people are going to make a realistic effort to help establish world peace.

The people, in this case, are the housewife, the business man, the teacher, the farmer or rancher, the editor, and the many others who make up a community. None will be professional diplomats, nor "international experts."

"It may seem like a gamble, to some people, but what can we lose," says Dr. Frank Sorenson of the University of Nebraska. "The scientists tell us we now have a bomb many times more powerful than the type used at Bikini; that another war may denude much of the civilized world of people."

Co-ordinator.

Dr. Sorenson was co-ordinator of the Nebraska delegation of over 75 persons who attended the mountain-plains regional conference of the United Nations educational, cultural and scientific organization held in Denver last week end. It was the first regional conference held in the U. S. About 1,800 persons from Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Nebraska, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Utah and Wyoming attended.

Nebraskans attending the conference will be the nucleus of a state organization to be formed under the direction of Chancellor R. G. Gustavson of the University of Nebraska. He is one of 99 persons on the national UNESCO commission.

"UNESCA was formed by 32 nations six months ago. It is part of the United Nations. But it is unique in this respect: It will be a co-operative venture. The private citizen will operate it; but his voice in international relations will be a specially created commission within the U. S. state department," Dr. Sorenson explained.

Operation.

UNESCO's program in Nebraska will operate pretty much in communities, according to Dr. Sorenson. It will seek world peace by attempting to persuade Nebraska people, through their own organizations as the American Legion, the P.T.A., Rotary, Lions, farm groups and professional societies, that "peace begins at home."

"But this program won't appeal to starry-eyed visionaries. It will consist of such simple things as discouraging people from calling the Chinese 'Chinks,' which is but one example of how a belittling word can create a prejudice against a great people," Dr. Sorenson says. "We also hope to encourage more organizations to help restore education in war devastated countries by sending paper and pencils abroad."

Peace Talk.

"But mainly we hope to get more people talking about peace, as remote as it seems, instead of war. UNESCO won't be a cure-all, and its success won't be measured in agreements between governments. We hope to contribute to peace and security by promoting co-operation among plain citizens of all nations through education, science and culture, and the free exchange of information."

Dr. Rosenlof, Olsen Discuss Education Plan

A four-fold educational program was outlined by C. Arild Olsen, representative of the educational and religious branch of military government in Berlin, Germany, when he met with Dr. G. W. Rosenlof Monday.

Olsen and Dr. Rosenlof discussed the exchange of students as well as professors, the recommending of individuals for appointment for positions in Germany and Austria for the next two years and the possibilities of the university setting up an educational sponsorship in Germany and Austria.

As a part of a special educational mission to this country, Olsen has had conferences with officials of Northwestern, the University of Minnesota, the University of Chicago and the University of Nebraska.
