A Wiser Choice . . .

Now that all-university church night has come and gone, it is hoped that free comment can be injected for future consideration without arousing the wrath of those responsible individuals who so unwisely set aside a closed activity night for the expressed purpose of allowing student religious organizations an option on the student's life.

From the psychological angle this writer feels that the religious groups on the campus have a distorted conception of the average student. Religion, like all other worldly things in this atomic civilization cannot and should not be literally shoved down the layman's throat, so it is suggested that attempts at same be terminated.

Religion is a part of successful living and should be presented as such. When a special night is set aside for religious observance, religion itself suffers, as it too, is set aside and cataloged as a foreign element in campus life that cannot fuse with other activities. This we know is not the express purpose of the all-university function, but nevertheless it is the impression that has been stamped on many student minds.

Making religion an integral part of learning and ultimately an integral part of life is the answer to success. Consequently don't unwisely make religion an abstract quantity. When there's a rally, allow religion to find its place in it; when there's convocation or learning to be done, let religion become a brother in the effort. Let religion become a part of campus life, don't force it. It's place is there and with proper usage it will take its seat for the betterment and benefit of all of us.

It Says Here

BY PAT NORDIN.

Romance still runs rampant on the UN campus...guess all the guys and gals have one track minds, and we don't care...it's giving us something to write about.

Determined is the word for SAE Ben Creed who spotted a Gammi Phi pledge in the library and from his description of her was directed to four of them before contacting the girl and promoting a date.

Diamonds are common at the Sigma Kappa house this season. At the head of the list of new engagements is that of Jean Bartizal and Chick Knowles, Pat O'Hara and Jim Winkler, and Nancy Moore and Beta Sig Matt Mattson.

The AOPi's have replaced their last year's mascot, a goat, with a Phi Psi, Jack Wells. Jack was elected after he became a permanent fixture on the AOPi porch.

Bashful Boy.

The Delts seem to have a bashful boy in Jim Sharp. Gamma Phi Luana Nelson wears both his ring and pin, but still Jim shrinks from candy passing.

Clair Williams, Kappa Sig who spent a lonely semester at UN last year is now making up for lost time since steady Fran Smith K.D., has transferred from Denver U. Furthermore, Fran is busy acquainting her roommate with the Kappa Sig's too, hence the twosome of Mary O'Connor and Hank Ayers.

Milton Mack of the Phi Kappa Psi house was somewhat perturbed Friday night when friend Margie Sturm, AOPi, failed to arrive in Lincoln for their date. Margie made it, 12 hours later, with an iron-clad alibi. The Nebraska football team surprised everyone by beating its opponent and Margie had to remain in the old home town and cover the story for the Ne-hawka Enterprise.

Phi Gam John Cover was the constant companion of his home town girl this week-end. Name—Kay Cover, who journeyed from Alliance with friends Jean Perrin, Joan Connell, and Harriet Edwards to play in the band for the Alliance-Northeast game. Although their team lost, the girls had a big week-end seeing the campus and enjoying sorority life.

Harriett Wilbourne, Delta Gamma, and Phi Psi Bill Eythe may be picking up where they left off last year. Ask either of them after Saturday night.

A song has been dedicated to Kappa Delta by Phi Gam Jack Boyant. It's called, "No one but Rembrandt could paint your beauty, so why did you give me the brush?"

It takes so little to disturb the peace these days. People can't even take showers without bothering the neighbors, and Gamma Phi's Barbara Roland, Torchy Rediger, Jimmy James and Carol Erdman found out the hard way. It wasn't even their idea.

Love Library To Sponsor Open House

Open house will be held at Don L. Love memorial library Oct. 4 and 5, it was announced Saturday by Frank A. Lundy, director of university libraries.

"As part of the open house," Mr. Lundy said, "dedicatory exercises will be held at 3 p. m. Sunday, Oct. 5, in the library." Librarians, alumni and interested citizens as well as the students are invited to the brief program to be held in the library study hall. Chancellor Gustavson will be the principal speaker.

Quarter Million Spent

The building has been in use as a library since 1945 when it was reconverted from wartime use as an ASTP barracks. The university has spent $250,000 furnishing and equipping the building since its return from army use. Only a few minor areas remain to be decorated and equipped.

Completed in 1943 when the army moved in, the library was erected with the gift of $850,000 from the estate of Don L. Love, for many years a prominent Lincoln lawyer, banker, and twice mayor of the city.

Love library marks a bold advance in library operations. Nearly a dozen of the 50 major educational institutions planning new libraries have visited Love library to learn more of the Nebraska plan.

Books are placed according to a "divisional plan," Lundy explained, in four large reading rooms, humanities, science, social studies and education. This is done to break down the barriers between students and books. Surrounded by books in the field of his particular interest, the student has only to pick one and start reading.

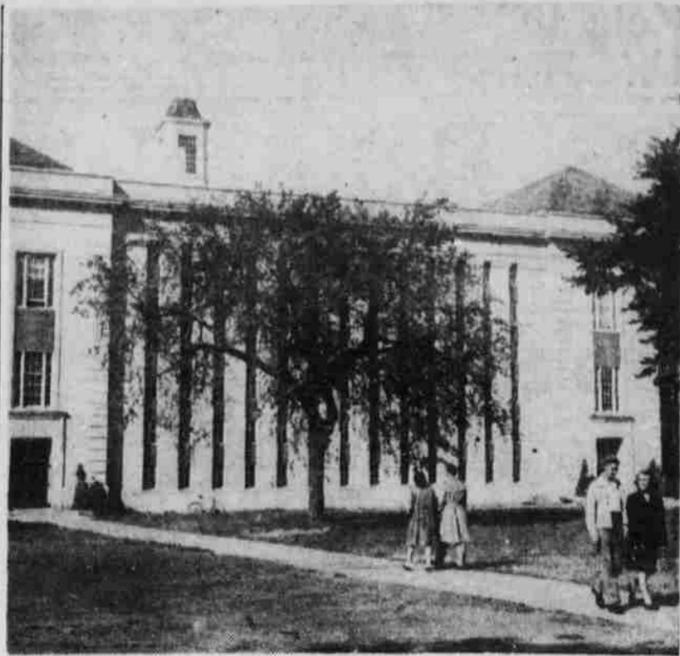

Out-Moded Methods Changed

A pneumatic tube and special conveyor will be in service to speed the books from the stacks to the student. Every step in the library's operation breaks with the traditional library where books were stored away museum fashion.

Love library has space for over 800,000 books and documents, plenty for all the books which it was once necessary to scatter at 23 separate points about the campus.

Six reading rooms provide space for over 1000 students under modern lighting conditions at spacious study tables.

Undergraduate library facilities have been used nearly to capacity by the students throughout the past year, according to David O. Kelley, assistant director in pub-

Former UN Dean Is LSU President

Dr. Harold W. Stoke, former dean of the graduate school of the university and more recently president of the University of New Hampshire, assumed the presidency of Louisiana State university last week.

He considers Lincoln as his home for he lived here longer than in any other place. Starting as a professor of political science in 1930, he left Nebraska as dean of the graduate school in 1939.

The 44-year-old schoolman, suggested by 50 heads of other universities, was selected for the job of heading the Baton Rouge institution after being a university president for three years.
