tion ceremonies," Dr. Lundy said. "Special tours through the building have been arranged for Saturday and Sunday."

Organization of Love library breaks with old library traditions. Four large reading rooms, each devoted to one broad field and under the direction of skilled library technicians, supplant the single general reading room and the stuffy reference and periodical rooms of the old style library.

Four Categories. Books will be divided into the four main categories of the humanities, science and technology, the social studies and education. Books of all types in these categories will be on open shelves in the respective reading rooms.

Modern stack design cuts the time required to obtain a book not on the reading room shelves. The future addition of a pneumatic tube and book conveyor system will give the library's physical plant the utmost in modern devices.

Love library is the realization of the dreams of nearly two generations of students at the university. It brings into one building the university library which once had books scattered in 23 places about the campus, under leaky roofs and in overloaded buildings.

Dean Thompson Reminds Students of Liquor Policy

A letter from T. J. Thompson, Dean of Student Affairs, has been sent to all student organizations, reminding them of the university's policy concerning the use of alcoholic liquors and drinking and driving.

The university's attitude is stated in the following sentences: "The serving of alcoholic liquors of any strength by student organizations either in organized houses or at public affairs cannot be regarded as acceptable or good educational practice; intoxication, intolerable and reprehensible as it is in civil life, is much more intolerable and reprehensible when indulged in by a representative of a university community."

The university's policy concerning drinking and driving states: "As a public institution it is believed the university should exercise any moral suasion possible to decrease and prevent the great number of accidents, many of them fatal, that are occurring on city streets and public highways. It should be understood therefore that it is the policy of the university to dis-iss students found to be operating motor vehicles while under the influence of alcoholic liquors."
