Graunke Pays Dual Purpose Visit to NY; Works, Plays

BY SAM WARREN.

The end of summer school 1947 brought no let-down or lull for Dean Graunke, Nebraska Masquers president, who took off to New York City for a round of Broadway play-going and general gaiety that included serving Cosmopolitan magazine as a guest fashion-juror at a Stork Club style revue!

Although he was one of eight men especially selected by Cosmopolitan for its representative college jury, Graunke had a more important reason for heading to the big city. Tucked under his arm were five play scripts destined for the eyes of Broadway Producer Brock Pemberton.

Nebraska Playwrights.

The scripts were the five finalists in the Nebraska Masquers three-act play writing contest which was open to any American college student. Running from the later part of May until the first of August, the contest drew entries from Syracuse University to CCLA, although the Middlewest walked off with the honors, Preliminary winners included two from Nebraska, and one each from the universities of Colorado, Southern California, and Drake.

Judges for the contest beside Brock Pemberton were Garrett Leverton, editor of Samuel French publications, and Lowry C. Wimberly, professor of English here and editor of the Prairie Schooner. The play selected will win for its author a $100 prize from Nebraska Masquers and rights to its premier performance by the University Theater.

Judges Women's Fashions.

As for the style revue, it's a monthly affair staged by Cosmopolitan's fashion department to determine which ones of the deluge of designs it will present its readers. Believing that women dress for men (certain well-known designers to the contrary), the magazine invites various men to weed out the styles that don't appeal to them.

Staged in the Cub Room of the Stork Club, the revue has invited such male celebrities as Henry Morgan, James Stewart, Bob Hope and symphony conductor Karl Kreuger, inviting college men, however, is something new. A souvenir gift for each juror from club manager Sherman Billingsly is a blue Indian-knit tie bearing the club's address "3 East 53rd." Graunke described Billingsly as "a very smooth character," adding, "He'd have to be, of course to engineer a spot with the Stork's national reputation."

Panel Agrees.

Between servings of food and drink, the eight-man college jury passed out their comments on evening gowns to the clubroom over individual microphones to the assembled buyers and designers. "We all seemed to agree, surprisingly enough," Graunke said. The gowns the jury picked as most striking will appear in the November issue of Cosmopolitan.

Chosen to serve on the jury were Paul Ctessel from the University of Missouri who attended Harvard summer sessions; Dick Littauer of Cornell; Bob Folan from Yale; Bob Slocum, Princeton; footballer Gene Rossides of Columbia fame; Seth Baker of Amherst College, and Gene Bokor, sports editor for the Dartmouth College newspaper.

AUF Director Calls for More Blood Donors

At least fifty more blood donors are needed to help meet the $13,200 goal of the All University Fund, Beth Noerenberg, AUF director, announced yesterday.

"The response so far has been favorable," she said, "but we still need about fifty more names."

Parents Consent Needed.

Miss Noerenberg stated that the students under 18 years of age who have signed up or who plan to sign up must have a letter of consent from their parents before they can be called to the hospital to give blood.

Students wishing to donate blood should contact Norm Leger in the Daily Nebraskan office any afternoon of the week. The list of student names is submitted to Student Health which will call each student to have a blood test taken if he doesn't have a record of his blood type.

Purpose.

The purpose of the All University Fund drive is to raise money on the campus for the Community Chest and the World Student Service Fund. The goal for this year's World Student Relief Fund is $2,000,000 of which $1,000,000 is to be raised in the United States thru the WSSF.

The student relief funds not only aid destitute students in foreign countries wrecked by the war but give help to professors in the universities thru furnishing supplies and providing rest camps.
