

Crib Notes

by B. J. Holcomb

Weekend note:

Awakening of the student spirit should make headlines as the note of the week . . . terrific turnout at Thursday's rally should be long remembered by every senior as the best in the past three years . . . frats cheering their players as they carried them shoulder-high to the steps of the Union . . . crowd enthusiasm five and six blocks long . . . hoarse voices constantly responding to cheers and songs . . . which brings us to the contribution of the week from one of our English classmates:

We've never heard a rally so loud
 A rally so chin-full of spirit
 Students so peppy and enthusiastic
 To the point that we could hear it
 Who said Cornhusker spirit was stone cold dead?
 And loyalty had gone its own way?
 Thursday night and Monday morn definitely proved
 Husker spirit is here to stay!

Style note:

Harvey's have the ideal ensemble for you males for autumn and winter wear . . . we're praising the beautiful slack and jacket corduroy sets now available in your favorite color . . . you'll be proud to wear this good-looking corduroy set for it will rate you as A-1 in choice of campus wear . . . easily mixed and matched with other slacks and jackets, these cords are priced to fit your school budget . . .

Chit-chat notes:

Some members of the special train to Notre Dame are still asking themselves "Why didn't I think of that?" after watching a pennant salesman sell red feathers for 25c apiece . . . seems Joan Farrar gave him some to promote school spirit, only to see commercialism rear its pennywise head . . . nothing could top the remark of one of the girls in the dining car as the train went through Iowa, "But why pull down the shades? It's still day time!"

The Eyes Have It

By Jeanne Kerrigan

A huge and slightly confused Collie just wandered into the Nebraska office and meandered casually into the editor's private sanctum . . . hard to keep up with all of Duke's consultees these days.

One law school coed, Barbara Cypriansen, is having a tough time . . . her moan, that she can't get her homework done . . . when she's at her sorority house the noise and commotion caused by all the girls disturbs her . . . when she's at the law library, the quantity of men there disturbs her . . . what's the poor girl to do?

Believe it or not department . . . Nancy White must be a girl with terribly poor eyesight . . . at least Gamma Phi sisters swear that she puts on her glasses to brush her teeth.

Overheard at East Hills . . . fellow to his date: "Did I tell you that you look very nice tonight?" Girl, expectantly: "Noooo" . . . Brutal reply: "Well, you don't."

The Sig Alphas have deplored their St. Bernard, Sig . . . because he just wasn't happy in their house . . . understand the housemother had something to say about it. The Sigma Nu's are also minus their mascot, a white, pink eyed rabbit.

Excerpt from a well known college man's memo pad . . . "Thursday, take bath!" . . . such drastic measures.

Campus Seen . . . Ralph Stewart walking to class backwards . . . seems he sat right in a puddle of water in a AOPi porch chair the other day.

Orchids beaucoup to the profs who overlooked 9 and 10 o'clock absences yesterday or didn't notice the students who got up and left. But cabbages to the profs who did mark absences and censored students for leaving class to show their loyalty to a team that played a bang-up game with Notre Dame.

The look in the eyes of the players as they made their way through a cheering throng of Husker backers in the Burlington station was indication enough that the rally had fulfilled a fine purpose.

No Purpose.

Of course, some of our erudite faculty members evidently couldn't see and purpose in the rally whatsoever. But then, we often have a hard time seeing a purpose in thm.

Also a bit of blasphemy is directed to the hundreds of students who could have gone but didn't. If there are any particularly good reasons, we'd like to hear them. Until then we'll go on blaming it on student lethargy, one of Nebraska's biggest drawbacks in acquiring a spirited student body.

Three Heroes

Three men students, whom we don't know, we would like to cite as the heroes of the week. When the ralliers invaded Sosh auditorium, they had courage enough to

Dear Editor:

In their last meeting Thursday evening, Pi Mu Epsilon, national mathematics honorary, voted to give twenty five dollars to the World Student Service Fund. It expressed the feeling of giving to the math students overseas who need so much.

Pi Mu Epsilon wants to spread the idea of honorary organizations giving to the All University Fund's drive to raise money for the WSSF.

Sincerely,
Martha Jones.
