Student Groups Will Pay Lower Rate for Coliseum

BY WALLY BECKER.

Official university policy on renting the coliseum was clarified Monday by A. J. Lewandowski, manager of the Coliseum Fund, following an investigation of alleged discriminatory rental charges assessed student organizations. Student complaints that campus organizations were being charged more for coliseum rental than outside organizations prompted the Daily Nebraskan in-ROTC to Honor

NROTC Exam Deadline Nears

Only five days remain in which Nebraska high school seniors and graduates and university students can apply for enrollment in the Navy's college training program, according to Capt. M. D. Mat-thews, USN, professor of naval science at the university.

The program offers a four year college education at Navy expense and a commission in the regular Navy or Marine Corps upon grauuation. Competitive exams will be taken by all applicants on Dec. 13 to be held in seven Nebraska cities: Alliance, Hastings, Lincoln, McCook, North Platte, Norfolk and Omaha.

Successful candidates will attend one of 52 universities over the country which have NROTC units. This university is numbered in the group.

for many European students to-day," Miss Angiola Siracusa, University of Rome law professor said Monday to more than 300 university students attending an AUF "Starvation Luncheon" in the Union ballroom.

Miss Siracusa, at present travel-ing throughout the United States WSSF, is a student of labor problems at the New York School of Social Work. She told her audience that her first contact with WSSF, came during the war when she served with the antifascist University Partisan Bri-

Immediately following the end of hostilities, the Italian professor said that she had an opportunity to travel through much of wardesolated Europe and commented that she could not impress upon her audience the importance of immediate aid to European students "whose plight is impossible for American college students to imagine."

Citing specific examples of student hardships, Miss Siracusa told of third year medical students in Greece who have never seen a microscope and young men and women attending the University of Krakow in Poland who must rely on a single mime-graph machine for information on scientific developments. She added investments.

When questioned on the present fascist tendencies of students in her homeland, Miss Siracusa answered that this was one of the biggest challenges facing American men and women. She said that many Italian youths of university age have never known anything but a fascist philosophy. From their earliest memories, they can recall nothing but government propaganda, saturating their lives and their text-books, and she concluded by pointing out that WSSF contributions will aid in replenishing libraries with books that have been banned for many years.

The attractive 25 year old Italian professor spoke movingly of the percentage of European stu-dents, "just like yourselves," who have developed advance cases of tuberculosis and must exist on one scant meal a day, despite their ill-health. At the sacrifice of other citizens of Italy, the government has alloted extra rations to university students, but Miss Siracusa said that a majority of them would rather stop going to school than take food from the young or the aged. Again she commented that WSSF funds could furnish stopgap aid to insure the continued attendance of Italian students, who, in turn, may some day represent one of the democray's best

Thomas Allen Competition Opens Dec. 2

The Thomas A. Allen Appellate law competition will open Dec. 2, the Board of Student Advisors announced Monday. Students who survived the opening round last semester will begin the competition on this date.

Arguing the first case will be student attorneys Harper and Moore against attorneys Scott and Lowe. Immediately following the opening case, Wolf and Strahle will argue for the defense against O'Leary and Jeffrey, attorneys for the defense.

Dec. 4 marks the beginning of freshman competition involving 26 teams. This semester the freshman round is a practice competition to aquaint the freshman with trial procedure. They are given a chance to enter the actual Allen Appellate which will decide the ultimate winner of the Allen Cup during the second semester. Attorneys for plaintiff Homan and will open the freshman round against defense attorney; Howell and Peter.
