Letterip

Dear Editor:

I sense in your "last word" editorial of November 13th, addressed primarily to members of the department of history faculty, a note of disappointment in the conduct of some of us who signed a letter giving certain facts relative to the career of Mr. Schuschnigg. If there was any implication in the protest against spending state funds upon a speaker of Mr. Schuschnigg's established character that the signers wished to engage him in controversy the writer is unaware of it. Nor can he see how the absence of members of the history faculty from the meeting deprived the audience in attendance of the benefits expected from questioning and controversy.

Perhaps it is worth repeating that the protest voiced against what Mr. Schuschnigg is. The protest was made to the Chairman of the Convocation Committee weeks before it was published. It is a protest against his character as revealed in his conduct of a government as a fascist dictator. Seven years in a Nazi prison gives him no positive qualification to quote the democratic language of Thomas Jefferson.

To what purpose would one appear at a public lecture to denounce the character of the speaker when the facts on which such charges are based involve the complex issues of central European politics? Such a discussion in the time available is the more fruitless before any audience that has not made a special study of the events involved in his career.

The writer regrets that the student body that attended the Schuschnigg meetings was disappointed, but he stated specifically to one newspaper reporter that he did not expect to attend, and he doubted if other members of the history faculty were interested in attending them.

Very sincerely,
J. L. Sellers.

Military Haul . . .

Undoubtedly selling like hotcakes—because they're for one of those affairs which "everyone goes to"—are tickets to the Military Ball. If you're in ROTC and plan to wear your uniform you'll get by on $3.30. If you're not in ROTC, but have a trusty uniform hanging "mothball" in the closet which can bring up old shades of war days and distinguish you as either commissioned or enlisted, you can wear that and still get by on $3.30.

If you prefer to wear a tux, or suit, and leave the uniform-wearing to the men of the ROTC, you'll get in for no less than $4.40.

Whether in uniform or not, you're going to be paying more than you did last year, either thirty or forty cents. And you probably won't question it, because you'll listen understandingly while hearing "everything's going up, you know, so we've got to raise ticket prices" from the ROTC ticket sellers.

We have a question, though. When the Cobs and Tassels can give a Homecoming dance with an $1,800 band, charging $3.00 per couple, and make a profit, where lies the reason why the Military department sponsoring the Military Ball with a $1,500 band (Sonny Dunham), $300 less than that of the Homecoming dance, asks thirty cents more per couple, in many cases, and $1.40 more, in a greater number of cases, per couple?

Anyone care to answer?

Sleeping Dog . . .

The Big Six racial discrimination clause is under fire again. Following an announcement by Cardinal Guild, Iowa State's senior men's honorary, that the organization was asking a revision of the existing rule which prohibits Negro athletes from participating in conference competition, the proverbial sleeping dog was aroused. Nebraska student government leaders quickly pledged support of the move and even went one step further by calling a conference of student leaders of all the Big Six schools on this campus, at which time the issue is to be discussed.

The idea of presenting the Big Six Board of Governors concrete evidence of student feeling on the issue is good. But, owing to the speed with which this student conference was conceived, will anything of importance be accomplished? What sort of a plan for discussion groups has been established? Will both sides of the argument be presented? Will any local clergymen or laymen, representing both races speak? Each school represented is to have one vote . . . vote for what? Are the respective delegates, merely going to meet, attend a Nebraska football game, cast a vote and go home, or will a well-planned agenda of round table discussions, be at their disposal for consideration? Minor questions but important ones. The Student Council represents 10,000 students and since the Council is assuming the sponsorship of this student conference its representatives must keep in mind that their expression is merely an echo of student opinion on this matter. Has the Council made a sound test of the Nebraska student body's feelings regarding the matter?

To repeat, the conference idea is a sound one but if it lacks preparedness it could also be disastrous. The proposed date of the student leader meeting is little more than a week away and the necessity of the confab is questionable. For the Council's own benefit a complete agenda should be announced as well as the response of other campuses to the proposed meeting. A sleeping dog may not bark but he might bite!

THE WHOLE TOWN MADE THE TEAM

26 major college football teams have players who were graduated from the White Plains, New York, High School.

This gold mine of college football talent is mainly the product of one Len Watters, who took over the team when it was an also-ran and coached it to national fame.
