

UN Veterans Seek to Raise GI Allotments

Norman E. Walker, the Nebraska representative of the University Veteran's Organization to the National Conference of Veteran Trainees in Washington, returned to Lincoln with his report.

According to Walker, efforts were made by the representatives on the first day of the conference to secure passage of the Meade Bill (HR866), before adjournment of the special session of Congress. Each delegate contacted the representative of his state personally in an effort to secure their cooperation in the passage of this bill.

Nebraska's representatives all declared themselves in favor of a "reasonable increase." When the bill was introduced, however, it was tabled because of the "gag rule" enforced in the last 24 hours of a session.

Compare Figures.

When the NCVT reconvened, its subsistence committee compared figures as to the cost of living in the states represented. This comparison indicated that the Meade bill was totally inadequate. Using this information, the delegation unanimously decided to support an emended version of the bill, calling for $100 for single veterans in school, $125 for married students, plus $10 for each additional dependent.
