

THE EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Chancellor Gustavson's comments at Sunday's Founder Day dinner have been greeted as straws in the wind by some students attending the banquet. They seemed to think that the Chancellor was hinting at a gradual "de-emphasis" of football at Nebraska.

Whether Gustavson meant to convey that inference or not, it appears to be high time for university students and the state to cool off about football at Nebraska. With countless other subjects far more worthy of attention, the editorial columns of this paper and nearly every other publication in the area have been overloaded with sports talk.

The sun doesn't rise and set on the football field and The Daily Nebraskan will try to keep that in mind in the future.

Our investigation of the operation of the Student Union is moving ahead slowly. The topic is extremely complex but we hope to be able to publish a complete series of articles on the Union before the end of the week.

One phase of the Union's operation seems to prove a theory that has been going the rounds of the university for a long time. There is an absolute lack of financial cooperation between the various departments.

Each cell of activity is well inured to any ideas of helping another part of the university financially. Inter-departmental work shows no awareness that each department is a part of one university.

Surely a system of preferential treatment could be installed so that student organizations would not be charged the same prices as non-university groups. At the same time, each department could examine its own books to see if costs have been reduced to a minimum when serving another department. This is not an indictment of the Union. As far as we can ascertain, the Union is one of the few places in the university where there is anything even vaguely resembling preferential treatment.

Whether high costs are deliberate due to inefficiency or due to this absence of cooperation will be investigated by The Daily Nebraskan. There has to be some reason for a non-profit unit charging prices equal to professional costs.

The projected nomination of a university professor for a national office brings up a touchy subject in connection with The Daily Nebraskan. Heretofore, it has been standard policy to avoid reference to political issues. Since The Daily Nebraskan is the official organ of the university, this is understandable.

However, with more registered students who are entitled to vote than ever before in the history of the school, there may be need for a change. How about it readers? Do you want political coverage in your paper? Such coverage would not involve editorial comment unless it is warranted. Any stories printed will be unbiased reports of political developments. Give it a thought and let us know your decision.

The fireworks should be interesting.

Patter by Pat

As another Penny Carnival becomes a memory, we commend all the swell troopers who made it such a success. Hats off to Sammy Clark, girl trombonist, who blew her brains out for two and a half hours—for the cause. A final professional touch was lent by Joel Bailey and Doris Devereaux in their explosive rendition of "Harry."

A new precedent may have been set by the success of the interfraternity ball at the Union. The ballroom took on a gala new atmosphere, the band was extra satisfactory, and all in all, Rod Franklin and crew did right by all concerned.

In fact, people came from far and wide to view the spectacle. From the far off city of Omaha came A. J. and Stan Kattleman while Illinois coed Phillis Wohlner was escorted by Bernie Wolpa.

Belle of the ball was undoubtedly Bob (Beauty Queen) Diers. Simply dashing in a black tux, Bob managed to be even more resplendent due to a striking pair of scarlet, corn yellow and chartreuse suspenders.

Sports Lovers
For the latest in entertainment we look to sports Gayle Lehsack and Bud Sitzman, boxers. No matter where they are or what the conditions, the boys put aside trivial matters to engage in fist-cuffs. Latest sparring place was the Royal Grove with Don McKay and Jack Adams refering the bout.

Of a quieter variety is the recent entertainment of the SDT's who are madly knitting argyle socks. The first batch came out colorful, wearable and minus holes, and were the work of Louise Komisor, Marcie Civin and Jackie Gordon. Lucky recipients were Larry Goldblatt, Marv Borden Bud Polsky.

Seeking social life elsewhere last week-end were Ginny Carter and Patsy Glazer. Ginny journeyed to Boulder for the Acacia Nut Party and Patsy took in the Phi Ep party at Iowa U.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of David Doyle please contact this office. When last seen Wednesday night, Doyle was heading east by fast express.
