US Tank Stars Better National, World Marks

Joe Verdeur of LaSalle college, Philadelphia, and Allen Stack, Yale captain, bettered world's swimming records last week in the sixteenth annual Yale swimming carnival.

Verdeur swam the 200-meter breast stroke in 2 minutes 32 seconds, three seconds better than his own mark for that distance. He also lowered his American record of 2:35.6, by two seconds.

Stack lowered the 400-meters international back stroke mark by racing the distance in 5:03.9. The Yale captain also bettered Michigan's Harry Holliday's 440-yard American record. Stack's time was 5:06, five and six-tenths seconds faster than the Michigan ace's time.

Iowan Contributes
Wally Ris, Iowa University star, also contributed to the week's record-breaking performances. The Hawkeye swimmer cracked the 220-yard free style national collegiate mark by swimming that distance in 2 minutes 13.7 seconds.

The Iowa swimming star also claimed a new American record in the 100-yard free style with a 51.9 seconds performance against Minnesota lastweek. The mark bettered the 52-second American record set by Johnny Weismuller, Illinois A. C., Aug. 1, 1925 in Seattle, Washington.
