FUTURE GOVERNMENT...

University of Nebraska students with an interest in campus affairs will vote today on candidates for the student council, the board of publications, Ivy Day orator and for a number of Ag campus officials.

But the election gives promise of being nothing more than the usual lack-luster ballot casting which is the rule rather than the exception in so many campus elections. In several instances there will be no competition because only enough candidates to fill the required number of positions have filed for office.

Such a condition is the result of the absence of political parties on the campus. It is too late this year to do more than make use of the write-in space on the ballots. But that is the only alternative for voters who do not care to have their representatives hand picked.

Because of the apparent shyness of any formal campus political organizations, today's balloting will produce a hollow mockery of the democratic principles of representative government.

The time element has become a considerable influence in this year's election. With the complete slate of candidates kept from the voters until the day of the election, there is no chance for any genuine judgment of the candidates.

One of the first deeds by the next student council should be the establishment of an election rule to provide definitely for at least two weeks between the closing of filings and the day of election. This much time is needed, especially when the eligibility checking of all candidates further limits the time between the presentation of the complete slate and election day.

Letterip

Editor:

We must question the sincerity of various political groups who pledged for student political alertness in this column only last week. Mr. Morrow and Mr. Ells, presidents of the Young Democrats and Students for Stassen respectively, connected the Wallace movement with such phrases as "selling their souls to Moscow" and "communist apologists." In answer to this, the University Students for Wallace tendered an invitation to a public discussion (minus the name calling) on the "bi-partisan foreign policy" which they support. This challenge has gone unheeded. If as spokesman for two major political organizations on the campus, these gentlemen were sincere in their plea for political awareness, then surely they should welcome an opportunity to give students a chance to hear both sides of this vital issue.

Therefore we reiterate: University of Nebraska Students for Wallace cordially invites the "bi-partisan foreign policy supporters" (Young Democrats, Students for Stassen, or their coalition) to a public discussion on these questions.

Liaison Officer Will Lecture Here Thursday

George Caraker, recently appointed Anglo-American liaison officer in London for the World government movement, will speak in the Love Memorial library auditorium Thursday evening, April 15, at 7:30.

His appointment was made by Henry Osborne, the general secretary of the parliamentary committee for World Government in the House of Commons. Caraker has been asked to deliver a series of lectures throughout the United Kingdom on the opinions and reaction to UNESCO, world government, and the Marshall plan in the middle-western United States. He has tentatively accepted this offer and hopes to leave for England this summer.

Caraker has done exclusive literature research with the Federation of Atomic Scientists and has attended conferences of UNO and interviewed some of the atomic scientists. During the 1946-47 season, he delivered a series of talks throughout the United States on his findings for this committee.

"The world is sitting on an earthquake which might erupt at any moment," Caraker declared in a statement to The Daily Nebraskan.

At tonight's meeting, sponsored by the university chapter of the United World Federalists, Caraker will discuss world government and local attitudes toward the idea. The meeting is open to all interested persons.

Chance Dance Friday Features Union Weekend

Activities for the weekend in the Union include two dances, the first a "Chance Dance" with Johnny Cox's orchestra. This dance, to be held in the Ballroom on Friday evening from 9 p.m. to midnight will award five season passes to winners of the door drawing. These passes will be good for the remainder of this season, and next year. Tickets for the "Chance Dance" will be 44c.

The second dance of the weekend will be a Juke-box Fling on Saturday evening in the Ballroom from 9 p.m. to midnight. There is no admission charge.

Sunday activities include the Coffee Hour from 5-6 p.m., and the free movie, "Western Union" a technicolor movie of the old west, starring Randolph Scott, Robert Young, and Virginia Gilmore. The movie is an honorable mention winner for its picturization of the development of the country.

Dr. H. S. Diehl to Speak At Student Health Convo

Expanded student health facilities at the University are to be honored by a special convocation in the Union Ballroom at 11 a. m. Thursday.

Dr. H. S. Diehl, dean of the University of Minnesota School of Medicine and U. S. public health authority, will help dedicate the new health service. The health service center, located temporarily in a converted army barracks building, was formally opened last February. It contains a 16-bed infirmary as well as clinical and office space.

The service is the most comprehensive ever offered Nebraska students, according to Dr. Samuel Fuenning, director of the University health service.

Dr. Diehl has been dean of the Minnesota medical college since 1935. He also has been a member of the executive council of the Association of American Medical colleges, member of the national advisory health council of the U.S. Public Health service, president of the American Student Health association and president of the North Central Student Health association.

The program, including a panel discussion, will feature Chancellor R. G. Gustavson, Dr. Harold Lueth, dean of the University Medical college, Dr. Holden, University of Colorado student health director and Dr. Robertson, Denver University student health director.

The panel discussion will center around student health problems encountered by schools throughout the state.

YW May Morning Breakfast To Be Held May 2 This Year

The Y.W.C.A. has announced its annual May Morning breakfast, to be held Sunday, May 2, in the Union. This event has been held for over fifty years, as the annual mother-daughter breakfast.

This year the theme will be the program chairman. Authentic costumes will highlight a skit portraying this observance in other countries. Kathy Schreiber, Virginia Guhin, Louise Cook, Joan Rhodes, Charlotte Richards, Shirley Allen and Tony Fleming will exhibit the costumes.

Engineers Visit KC Industrial Plants on Trip

Senior chemical engineers visited three industrial plants in the Kansas City area Monday and Tuesday.

Thirty-two men and one woman student went on the annual field trip with Dr. H. T. Bates, chairman of the department of chemical engineering. All students in the College of Engineering must attend and report on one such trip as a requirement for graduation.

The group inspected the Sugar Creek Refinery of the Standard Oil Company, at Independence, Mo., Monday. Production of commercial gasoline products from crude petroleum was explained.

Soap making and packaging and electroplating processes were ex-

A short worship service preceding the breakfast will be presented by Mary O'Dell. To further the theme, Joan Leaming has designed a modernistic cover for the menus.

Principle speaker will be Mrs. John P. Cope. The Sigma Alpha Iota ensemble will sing a group of several numbers.

Although the breakfast is traditionally a mother-daughter event, Miss Mildred Taylor stressed that it will not be necessary to bring a guest.

"May Day Around the World," according to Audrey Rosenbaum, examined Tuesday. The Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company was visited in the morning and the manufacture of the new detergent type cleaners seen. Before returning, the Bar Rusto Electroplating Corporation was inspected.

The group made individual checks of Kansas City brewery products Monday evening.
