'Hub of Harmony' Chorus Presents Concert Sunday

BY BEV SIEVERS

The Hub of Harmony, a group of eleven students from College View college will present a concert Sunday, April 18, at 8:15 p. m. in the University Coliseum. Betty Bradford, from Kansas City, Kansas will appear as guest soloist. Lois Bookhardt will accompany the group. Dr. Gerald Kennedy, minister of St. Paul Church, will act as master of ceremonies and Dr. G. W. Rosenloft, registrar of Nebraska University, and Clyde Malone, executive secretary of the Lincoln Urban League will each give a short address as to the purpose and aims of the group.

The group has been organized for nearly a year and was begun for the purpose of aiding the educational endeavors.

While the "Hub" has presented many programs in the city and given concerts throughout the state and in neighboring states, this will be the first concert given in Lincoln.

The group specializes in spirituals and though the concert will feature mainly this type of music there will also be classified and semi-classical songs offered.

Frank Hale Jr., is the director of the group and also sings with them. Wayne Hooper coaches the "Hub" and both Hooper and Hale arrange their music.

The Hub of Harmony will include in their itinerary of the year concerts in Topeka, Junction City, and Abilene, Kansas in June.

Members of the group include Herbert Alexander, Joseph Butler, John Bookhardt, Le Roy Bookhardt, Andrew Donnelly, Frank Hale, Bertrand Nunley, Charles Sear, James Valentine, John Washington and Milton Woodson.

Foltz Will Direct Haydn's Creation

Haydn's oratorio, "The Creation," will be presented by the University Choral union as its annual spring oratorio Sunday, April 25, at 3 p. m. in the Coliseum. Under the direction of Professor David Foltz, the production will involve nearly 700 university students.

The Choral Union is composed of the University Singers, two sections of University Chorus and the College of Agriculture Chorus. The groups, directed separately by Dr. Arthur Westbrook, Professor Foltz and Mrs. Altina Tullis, combine twice during the season for a Christmas and spring oratorio. "The Messiah" is the traditional offering at Christmas but the spring presentation varies from year to year.

The 75-piece University Symphony Orchestra, prepared by Professor Emanuel Wisnow, will participate. At the organ and piano will be Professors Myron Roberts and Earnest Harrison, respectively.

Soloists for "The Creation" will include a university student and an instructor, and a guest soloist. Tenor soloist is Franklin E. Barger, who has performed with the Denver Grand Opera company, with the Olinger quartet over NBC and CBS out of Denver, and in numerous oratorio performances at the City auditorium in Denver, the University of Colorado at Boulder, and the Corn Palace at Mitchell, S.D.

Robert Anderson, fine arts senior, will be bass soloist. Director of a local church choir, Anderson recently was one of three state winners of the nation-wide Carnegie Hall auditions which take him to New York City to perform next Tuesday, April 20 at the famous concert hall.

A lead in the university performance of "Carmen" in February, Anderson sang with the Lincoln Symphony Orchestra as audition winner a year ago, and with the University Symphony orchestra earlier this month.

Soprano soloist will be Mrs. James Ganz, instructor in voice at Nebraska Wesleyan university, who has made a number of solo appearances in Lincoln.

Registration Procedures Start Monday

Summer and fall term registration will begin Monday morning with the seniors being the first to go through the procedures. Registration tickets will be issued from Temporary Building B, the first white frame building south of Andrews hall.

To be able to register with their class, seniors and juniors must bring their credit books, grade reports and yellow evaluation tickets to the registry. It will be necessary for all students to bring their identification cards, according to F. W. Hoover, assistant registrar and assistant director of admissions.

Tickets will be issued in this order:

April 19—Seniors and graduate students (89 or more semester hours earned to date).

April 20—Juniors (53 to 88 semester hours earned to date).

Ticket one for sophomores and freshman, for example will go to the first student on April 21, ticket two to the first student on April 22, and ticket three to the first student on April 23.

INNOCENTS will hold tackling practice Monday night at 7:30.

Election Discrepancies Told; Monson Wins Ag Exec Post

... No Official Report Prepared

By Pat Nordin.

Because of an inaccuracy in election results and of irregularities surrounding the annual spring elections last Thursday, the Daily Nebraskan presents corrections and errors and an account of pre-election details.

Gwen Monson, sophomore candidate for Ag Exec board, was elected to the board Thursday although her name was not among those listed in Friday's Daily Nebraskan.

Neal Baxter, sophomore candidate, was elected to the Ag Exec Board as reported along with Alice Boswell and George Pinkerton, freshmen candidates. Jean Wielage was not among the freshman winners. She was listed as being elected.

No Report

No official report of election returns was prepared by the election committee chairman, Stan Ahrends, to present to the Daily Nebraskan or to file with Council records.

Publications of the Ag election figures were denied the Daily Nebraskan following a decision by the Ag Exec board advisors, Irwin L. Hathaway and C. E. Rosenquist. According to Hathaway, it has been the policy for years not to release the figures because, "in the face of overwhelming majority for one candidate, it relieves embarrassment and tension for those who poll a very low vote."

Rosenquist agreed with Hathaway but stated that as advisors, they could not make the final decision and that such action would be up to the Ag Exec board. A meeting being impossible at that time, the Daily Nebraskan published the names minus the figures. Figures on the election of Ag college representation on the Council were secured only by special permission of the advisors who recognized the Council's authority to publish Council returns.

Time Elements

The Daily Nebraskan's difficulty in obtaining a complete list of election candidates for publication with statements of policy and platform was explained by failure of the election committee chairman to submit applications to the registrar's office in sufficient time for checking the candidates.

The applications were first submitted to Dean Harper's office. The Dean's secretary, Phyllis Crandall, stated that little was known about the election in that office and that no duplicate list of applicants was retained. Lack of information in that office as to exact application form may have been one cause for the omission of names from the ballot. Failure of the Council to publish a complete list of the necessary qualifications may also have contributed to filing errors.

Errors in Filing

Shirley King, bizad junior, Anne Whitham, arts and sciences junior, and Dora Lee Niedenthal, fine arts junior, were omitted from the ballot due to errors in filing.

The error on the part of the Council Election committee omitting the name of Shirlee Wallace, bizad junior, from the Pub Board ballot caused the Judiciary committee to rule the election of senior Pub board members invalid. Miss Wallace had filed correctly and therefore contested the election.

The Council elect will hold a re-election for that position alone some time next week, Ned Raun, chairman of the Judiciary committee, announced.

Social Science Students Print Case Work Plans

Association of Social Work Students has brought out the spring issue of its publication, the "Face Sheet," with Lotus Nicholas as editor.

Two papers written by students, Susan Gibbs and Paul Hamilton, for a class in case work theory appear in the "Face Sheet," as well as news of student and faculty activities. This issue of the publication, which is now in its ninth year, has been sent to 12 schools of social work in the mid-west.

The University of Nebraska Foundation is officially organizing "class agent program" this week to encourage greater interest in the University by its 60,000 alumni and former students.

Fifty-two prominent Cornhusker alumni living from coast to coast will be responsible for soliciting funds to assist in development of the University of Nebraska, through the 33,000 graduates selected for the Foundation's initial expansion step.

Brings Grads Closer

H. S. Wilson, of Lincoln, Foundation president, explains it this way: "Our aim is to bring every graduate closer to the activities of the University and the Foundation. It will also give them a chance to make their contributions through their own classes. As time goes on we hope to stimulate a real rivalry between the classes."

"Every great university has a great foundation through which alumni and friends may give," according to Chancellor Gustavson. "The Nebraska Foundation shares in our belief that the university is on the threshold of a great development. To meet the challenge of this development, the Foundation seeks the interest and support of alumni and the many other friends of the institution."

New Program

It is hoped that the class agent program may eventually yield in excess of $200,000 annually. This money, plus funds received from existing sources, will be used to support scholarships, fellowships, student loan funds, research, equipment and additions to the University's physical plant.

The Foundation's contributions to the University have shown progress, Mr. Branch said. In 1944 the University and its students received only $3,700 from the Foundation; but in 1947 this figure increased to $79,110. The Foundation's assets now total more than half a million dollars.

Metal Company to Display Aluminum Products, Films

The Reynolds Metals company, manufacturers of aluminum, will have a display coach on the campus all day, Monday, April 19. This will be located between Grant Memorial and University Hall.

The coach has its own power plant and in addition to a complete line of aluminum products, it has provisions for the showing of motion pictures to a small seated audience.

It is urged that engineering students make it a point to stop in to see the many pictures and demonstrations available in this particular coach.

Farmers Fair Rodeo Hands Survey Completed Ag Arena

By Merle Stalder.

Leaning on the old top rail, rodeo hands Pete Becker, Don Finch, Jim Curtis, Sam Spencer and Frank Kent took over the new rodeo arena north of the Ag Union. Constructed by volunteer student labor, this arena will be the site of the Farmers' Fair Rodeo to be held Saturday, May 1.

This year marks the return of the colorful Ag campus tradition after an absence of seven years. Present plans indicate that the rodeo will be complete in all phases including a parade.

The girls are not altogether being forgotten in preparation for events like bronc riding, steer riding, and calf roping; a special coed calf catching contest will provide the fairer sex with a chance to get into the rodeo spirit for a day. Competition in all events is limited only to regularly enrolled students in order to keep the rodeo strictly collegiate.

Hailing from such towns as Ashby, Nebraska, Sagunche, Colorado, and Rosewell, New Mexico, the students pictured above are a few of the many rodeo enthusiasts who will give the Farmers' Fair Rodeo of 1948 a true western flavor.

Farmers' Neckerchiefs

The "new look" on Ag campus—Farmers Fair neckerchiefs! Bright colored western neckerchiefs for the Farmers Fair will go on sale today in Ag Hall and tomorrow in the Ag Union for the price of 15 cents.

Red, blue and green, these neckerchiefs will be the order of the day for Ag students from now until the big day of May 1, when the Fair opens.

Hand made by the Amikitas, social organization on Ag campus, they will be sold under the supervision of Betty Beckner, Amikita chairman in charge of making them.
