NEW ATTITUDE . . .

A common sense attitude toward campus elections is needed.

Instead of regarding the results of student balloting as a secret which must be divulged only to the fewest number of people, the student council election committee should realize that election results are a matter of public interest and should be publicized without hesitancy.

Along with an about face in the matter of releasing election results, the council elections committee has a portion of its rightful duty still to perform in the most recent election.

When the Daily Nebraskan made an effort to get a complete tabulation of all votes cast for all candidates in all of the various divisions of the election, those results were unavailable. Information coming to this office indicates that the council failed to count ballots for offices which appeared to be sewed up due to the filing of only two or three men for two or three offices.

Write-in votes went disregarded because of this attitude. Of course it is doubtful that any candidate received enough write-in votes to oust one of the candidates whose names appeared on the ballot, but on the basis of public interest and a complete discharge of its election duties, the council should wind up the ballot counting.

The entire election machinery could stand an overhauling. The filings were a source of continual disturbance to the university officials and to the council election committee. Several would-be candidates were disqualified because they filled out their applications incorrectly.

Several of the questions on the application blanks were open to double interpretation and were the immediate cause of the absence of some candidates names.

The attitude of university authorities on the subject of releasing complete election results is difficult to understand. Any student with the intention of gaining an office should be ready to accept publication of the results, whether he wins or loses.

There can be no denying that the student body has a right to complete election results. Such information is in the public interest. The hush-hush atmosphere must be abandoned.

Curtis Aggies to Prepare For Boys Ranch Camp

Fifteen youngsters have already made reservations to attend the Boys Ranch camp to be held at the University of Nebraska School of Agriculture here next June 21-July 31, Supt. K. K. Douthit said. The camp is held mainly to give boys living in large towns and cities an introduction to farm and ranch life.

Dear Editor,

The question has been raised by students (particularly those who have had work at other schools): "Why doesn't the Blue Print put out as large a magazine with as wide coverage as does, for example, the Iowa Transit or the Minnesota Technologist?"

A magazine like the Blue Print needs at least 10 pages a month for regular features. Such a magazine also needs 10 or 12 pages for advertising. If the magazine has 24 pages total, only 2 to 4 pages are left for original student articles.

If we were to get more advertising, we would have to devote more space to advertising. The only sure way to increase the space given over to original editorial material is to increase the revenue from subscriptions.

This year, if students are willing, they can have a magazine consisting of as much as 40 pages each issue, 18 pages of which is new material, by supporting our proposal for a 75-cent fee to be collected each semester from all men registered in the engineering college. Mr. Colbert has assured us that the fee will be paid by the government in the case of students attending school under the two veterans' bills.

In answer to another question that has come up several times, the Blue Print offers no direct financial reward to its staff members. Blue Print awards consist of keys (presented at the annual Engineers' Banquet) and bound volumes.

Other advantages than those resulting from a larger and more comprehensive magazine may be noted. Such things as having the circulation staff work efficiently from the start of the semester will iron out the troubles experienced this year in getting their magazines to some of our subscribers on time. I should note that we plan to continue our policy of mailing each issue to all subscribers.

Ag Barbecue Tickets on Sale

Tickets for the Farmers Fair barbecue are now on sale at the Ag Union for 70 cents a person. The barbecue is limited to Ag students, faculty and alumni of Ag college.

The barbecue menu has been announced as follows: barbecued round steak, buns, vegetable salad, potato chips, ice cream, cake, and milk or coffee. Tickets will be sold for a limited time only so students are urged to get theirs early.

Starting at 11:30 Friday, April 30, the barbecue pits will be lighted in a huge out of doors Farmers Fair spirit for the following day. It will be held following the pre-Fair dance Friday night at which the Goddess of Agriculture and the Whisker King will be presented.

After the pits have been burning for nearly 24 hours, the big barbecue will be served at the pits out of doors at 5:30 Saturday evening, May 1.

Ag Methodists Plan to Open Student Center

The Wesley Foundation, which conducts the program for Methodist students at the University, will hold open house at its new Ag student center Sunday, April 18, from 2 to 5 p.m.

This marks the official opening of the student house at 3357 Holdrege Street, which will be "a home away from home" for students in the Ag College community.

Rev. Richard Nutt, director of the Wesley Foundation, announces that the new student house is the result of a number of years of work on the part of the foundation staff and board of trustees.

Dr. T. H. Goodding of the Agronomy department is chairman of the Ag College committee of the Wesley foundation which has been in charge of the new development.

The center is available for the use of all student groups in the Ag area, regardless of denominational connections and is under the supervision of LaRoy Seaver, associate director of the Wesley Foundation. All students and faculty members are invited to attend.

Carter to Speak At Honors Convocation

Judge Edward F. Carter of the Nebraska Supreme Court will be the principal speaker at the annual honors day convocation to be held next Tuesday at 10:15 in the Coliseum.

Judge Carter will speak on, "The Relation of Education to Political Conflicts."

Fifty-seven senior students who are now in the upper three percent of their classes or have been in the upper ten percent for four years or more will be among the 1,000 honor students to be recognized for high scholarship. All students in the upper ten percent of their classes in their respective colleges will be recognized.

A luncheon honoring Judge Carter will be held at the Union at noon Tuesday. University faculty members have been invited.

Classes will be dismissed from 10 to 1 Tuesday and the library will be closed during these hours.

UN Profs Attend Social Work Meet

A. W. Duning, Dr. Frank Glick, and Marian Lowe of the school of social work faculty are attending meetings of the national conference of social work, the association of social work schools, and the American association of social workers in Atlantic City. These meetings began April 17 and will last a week.

Dr. Glick is national vice president of the American Association of Social Workers and Miss Lowe is chairman of the Nebraska chapter. She is also on the nominating committee of the national conference.

This year the first post-war meeting of the international conference of social work is being held concurrently with the other meetings in Atlantic City.
