

Vacancies Open for July Air Force Pilot Training

Only a few more weeks remain for college men to qualify for the Air Forces' Cadet pilot training classes beginning July 1, Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, commanding general of the Air Defense Command at Mitchel Air Force Base, New York, announced recently.

There are still some vacancies for the July training which leads to an officer's commission and pilot's wings. Men graduating in June are urged to complete their applications without delay in order to qualify for the next class. Men who do not complete their qualifications in the next few weeks will have to wait until the Oct. 15 class.

Income Assured After Training. Successful Aviation Cadet candidates are assured of a monthly income of up to $336 after only 12 months of training. Pilot officer training is open to all unmarried male citizens between 20 and 26½ years of age who are in excellent physical condition, who have had two or more years of college or can pass an examination of the educational equivalent, and can pass the qualifying exam to measure the degree to which they have the aptitude for modern military flying.

Graduates of the Air Force pilot training course will be commissioned second lieutenants in the Air Force Reserve, given their aeronautical ratings as pilots and assigned to Air Force units for active flying duty. Up to five percent of each Aviation Cadet graduating class will be offered regular commissions under the United States Air Force program.

Training Lasts Nine Months. Basic training lasts 35 weeks and is given in Texas at either Randolph, Goodfellow or Perrin Air Force Base. Basic graduates get 15 weeks of advanced training, either in single-engine aircraft at Arizona's Williams Base, or in multi-engine aircraft at Barksdale Air Force Base in Louisiana.

Further information may be obtained at the nearest Air Force Base or from the Chief of Staff, United States Air Force, Washington, D.C., Attention: Aviation Cadet Branch.

Potential Cornhuskers . . .

Once again the University is playing host to a large number of high school students who will be on campus for the Nebraska high school track meet. And once again U.N. students have the pleasant duty of welcoming these students and encouraging them to give due consideration to the U. of N. when the time comes for them to make a choice as to the college they wish to attend.

A University is only as good as its students and professors, and if the U. of N. is to maintain or raise its present standards it must make a conscientious effort to obtain from all of the Nebraska high schools the best students and encouraging them to give due consideration to the U. of N. when the time comes for them to make a choice as to the college they wish to attend.

We hope that in the short time they will be here our guests from the state high schools discover our assets as well as our faults. Although our assets are not as apparent as our faults—our lack of a beautiful campus and the present crowded conditions—they should find that these physical failings are made up by a friendliness unknown to many other large schools. Nebraska students, for the most part, are unpretentious, sincere and are easy to become acquainted with.

If University students take a sincere interest in the activities of the high school students and concern themselves with these students' future schooling, the student body will have gone a long way in contributing to the welfare of our state university.
