

Drama Cavalcade . . .

"Want In The House" was his first work to attract serious attention when it opened at the Savoy Theatre, New York, just 40 years ago on Monday, March 23, 1908. Two actors closely identified with that first production were Walter Hampden and Tyrone Power (father of the screen star). The female lead was played by Edith Wynne Matthison, noted American actress, and incidentally, the wife of the playwright.

Johannes Directs

Returning to the current Actors' Lab production, Don Johannes, the director, gives several reasons for choosing this play for presentation: a small cast and single setting, simplifying technical problems; seven roles which all provide good acting parts, with no "walk-ons" or extraneous minor characters; and an illustration of allegory and ethical purpose combined with interesting theatrical effect.

In the cast, Jack Asbyll, Omaha freshman, is playing his first lead as Manson. Jack was seen in a supporting role in "Return to Surigo." Norm Leger, appearing as the Vicar, previously worked in "The Petrified Forest." Merle Stalder, Robert, has played supporting roles in "MacBeth," "Pygmalion," and "Children of the Moon." Clare Denton was seen as Joans younger brother in "Joan of Lorraine" this season. All four of these men also appeared this week in "The Taming of the Shrew."

First Appearance Here

Ken Frohardt, a Wesleyan graduate, is new to the University Theatre. Lincoln playgoers may recall his Edward Moulton-Barrett in last year's Wesleyan production of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." Appearing as Auntie, Betty Laird is another transfer student, having played Mrs. Manningham in "Angel Street" & Hastings College last season. On the Temple Experimental stage, Betty created the role of the understanding wife in "Return to Surigo." Playing the young niece, Mary, Pat Boyd was seen here last year in "Angel Street" and "The Silver Cord."
