Westmoreland Urges Veterans To Study June Check Insert

Nebraska World War II veterans who receive monthly subsistence checks from the Veterans Administration are urged to study carefully a printed insert explaining the new "ceiling" law which is enclosed with their June 1 checks.

Ashley Westmoreland, manager of the Lincoln VA regional office, said the printed instruction explains which veterans are eligible for increased subsistence benefits under the new law signed May 4 by President Truman. He advised them not to write or contact the VA about the new law, because the higher rates will be paid automatically to GI Bill trainees whose existing records with VA contain the information needed. When additional information is needed the VA will request it.

Ceiling provisions of the law provide that earned income plus government subsistence pay shall not exceed $210 a month for a trainee veteran without dependents; $270 for a trainee-veteran with one dependent, and $290 with more than one dependent.

Westmoreland said many of the state's veterans in training will be eligible for the higher pay rates.
