

Firemen Find Slight Damage At Love Library Thursday

All of Lincoln's available fire-fighting equipment was rushed to Love Memorial library last Thursday. The library is pictured above.

Answering an alarm, firemen found two squares of a ceiling surfacing material charred and fallen into a modernistic lighting fixture.

It was suggested by Fire Chief E. P. Feaster that defective electric wiring might have caused the fire damage. He also suggested that fire hazards in the building might be reduced through removal of shreds of excelsior found near one of the air conditioners and through removal of a boardwalk in the building's attic.

Fire would endanger the thousands of books and some rare or irreplaceable volumes of antiquity that are housed in Love Library. At present it contains the famed United Nations exhibit which is the only exhibit of its kind in existence. The exhibit will be in the library until about June 24. It was brought to Nebraska as an educational experiment to teach people about the nature and operations of the United Nations. The educational program may develop into one of international scope.

Educators End Counseling Confab Friday

A three day counseling and guidance conference attended by school representatives from 15 states ended here Friday.

The conference, in a final shot at inadequate teacher training courses, adopted a report from its basic course committee which said teacher training schools should make available counseling and guidance fundamentals for all students who expect to teach.

The committee was hitting at the principle that it is the teacher's responsibility to provide not only academic training, but also the help the students need with their individual problems. J. E. Woods of the University of Omaha, head of the committee, had this to say about teacher training institutions:

"There is an apparent reluctance on the part of teacher trainers to introduce new courses or reorganize existing ones to adequately implement a training program for personnel workers."
