

Foreign Students Attend Nebraska

35 Countries Represented By 125 Students In '47-'48

One hundred twenty-five students from 35 countries, making up the largest contingent of foreign students ever enrolled, joined the University's citizen students during the 1947-48 semesters. Although foreign students have always been readily admitted to the University, the numbers seeking admission were not large prior to World War II. Immediately following the end of the war, however, foreign enrollment began a steady increase, and is still on the upgrade. Students have entered both graduate colleges and professional schools.

Students Mixed.

Representatives of Norway, Sweden, Denmark, France, Czechoslovakia, Netherlands, England, Turkey, China, Iran, Iraq, Egypt, India, Cyprus, Palestine, Colombia, Ecuador, Venezuela, Peru, Argentina, British West Indies, Panama, Honduras, British Guiana, Puerto Rico, Alaska, Hawaii, Canada and Malaya are all studying at the University.

Five foreign exchange scholarships, authorized last year by the Board of Regents, were established. Two University graduates were chosen to attend schools in Czechoslovakia and Switzerland, and one exchange student, Paul Dzavik, came from Czechoslovakia to Nebraska.

Ten Scholarships Granted.

Authorization was made recently by the Regents for ten scholarships of $300, which will be awarded foreign students registered at the University for next year and who have been registered for one year or more at Nebraska. The Lincoln Rotary club and the Cooper foundation gave four scholarships of $75.00 each last year.

Although housing for women foreign students is available at the campus International house, the University hopes to be able in the near future to establish a similar house for the benefit of all foreign students. Cosmopolitan club on campus sponsors activities for students from other countries, and is open for membership to all students, either foreign or U.S.

Enrollment Hits 10,000 Third Time

It's about two weeks to the opening of classes Sept. 15 at the University of Nebraska and indications are that enrollment for the third consecutive year will be about 10,000.

University officials have put out an urgent plea to freshmen who expect to enroll at Nebraska this fall to submit their applications for admission at once if they have not already done so.

Floyd W. Hoover, assistant director of admissions, said all freshmen are due on the campus Sept. 9 for guidance examinations. Some, however, will be here a day earlier in response to notices from the student health center for physical examination appointments. He stressed that freshmen students will not be permitted to complete their registrations until after they have taken their guidance examinations.

UN Educational Clinic Held Here

First Experiment to Bring Americans Close to Idea

A headline reading "University to be Testing Ground for UN Educational Experiment" in this summer's Nebraskan strikes a new and pleasant note in the history of the University.

The summer UN clinic indicates clearly in which way the sympathies of the University lie—toward co-operation and understanding of world affairs.

Your University was for two months the testing ground for an experiment that the UN hopes to make the basis for an international program about its aims and accomplishments. The experiment, here and in other schools, will try to correct the idea among Americans that the United Nations is far away from them.

The obvious course for an institution where people go to learn, and to grow with their knowledge, is that of taking part in not only the things that appear to affect them directly now, but in anything that may affect the life of the University in the future.
