

Fashion Plate

By Carolyn Bukacek

Either the national debt has risen some three-fold, or papa's financial status has improved, resulting in a lot of chatter-material for the girls and swoon-material for the fellows. The entering UN coed is dressed with more style, and just plain more, than ever before. Witness the plaid taffeta petticoat peeking from under the hem of Lois Elwell's hunter green crepe dress. The long sleeves boast a ruffle of the same taffeta.

With a happy smile Candy Jones greeted rushees in a dark green gabardine suit which features a row of self buttons up the back of the box jacket. Or you might have caught a glimpse of Lois Clark in her beige knit dress. The two piece outfit has a tiny turnback collar and is worn with green accessories. Janice Bruce looks like a party is in order when she wears a black brocaded suit with a green overcast. A black pillbox tied under the chin with veiling completes the outfit. Jeannie Bowling Codington looked mighty special when she smiled at Jack on Tuesday last. She wore a light grey taffeta wedding dress, and roses trimmed the matching felt hat. Our best to you, Jeannie!

A black wool crepe dress has soft ermine tails at the throat and waist back in a tiny bustle and looks well on the petite Pat Nor-jin. To beat the heat of rush week Marge Bock wore a smoothly tailored suit of crisp white linen. Annette Carnahan was vivid in a scarlet crepe dress with a tucked all-around peplum and gold accents.

The "elite" of the campus, the Mortar Boards, are properly proud of their black gabardine suits. The insignia of the group is applied on the pockets in gold.

Flight of foot of Jody Loder in a pair of yellow and tan geronimos.

The results of all this glamour may mean furor at home, but according to the boys it rates a "nine" on any gal's report card.

'Law Review' Will Choose Staff Members

Sixteen second year and three third year students will compete in September for positions on the editorial staff of the Law Review, a quarterly published by the University of Nebraska college of law and the Nebraska State Bar association.

Dean Frederick K. Beutel said selection for the competition is one of the highest scholastic honors given by the college.

Third year students who will compete are William H. Tewell, Sidney; Ronald H. Strahle, Stanton, and Joseph R. Seacrest, Lincoln.

Second year students who will compete are: Ray C. Simmons, Theodore C. Sorensen, Forrest N. Fugate, Shirley D. Kling, Thomas J. McManus, and George E. Howard, all of Lincoln; William M. Grossman, Edgar; Richard A. Knudsen, Cleveland, O.; C. Jess Nielsen, Dannebrog; James E. Hunter, Jr., Fairfax, Mo.; Richard L. Berkheimer, Gordon; Lyle A. Chotena, Marquette; Lee Calvin White, Omaha; George W. Abbott, Casper, Wyo.; Don A. Boyd, Superior, and Raymond K. Calkins, Beatrice.

Vets May Renew Life Insurance

Veterans carrying National Service Life Insurance term policies will be able to renew them for an additional five years upon expiration of the present term period, the veterans administration announced this week.

Those who renew their term insurance when it becomes necessary will pay a higher rate than before, based on their higher age at the time of renewal.

Major Fellowships Awarded To Four University Students

Four major fellowships with a cash value of $2,600 have been awarded to many outstanding students taking advanced work at the University of Nebraska.

Recipients of the Ak-Sar-Ben Fellowships, worth $800 and tuition each, are Dale Fuehring, Seward, and Donald D. Ziegler, Ashland. Fuehring graduated from the college of agriculture in June and will study the relation of calcium and phosphorus to the production of legumes in sandy soils in Nebraska.

Ziegler, a bacteriology major, graduated from the university in June and will study the liberation of starch from potatoes by microbial fermentation.

The new Regents Fellowships of $1,000 and tuition each, have been awarded to Kwang-chung Tsou and Fred W. Starks, both working on their doctor of philosophy degrees in chemistry at the university. Mr. Tsou of Nanking, China, received his masters degree from the University of Illinois in 1947.

Former UN Prof Receives Award

Benedict F. Raber, former University of Nebraska faculty member, has been awarded a medal for the excellence of his paper presented to the Seventh International Heat Congress in Paris recently.

Raber's paper, written in association with F. W. Hutchinson, was entitled, "Rational Analysis of Panel Heating and Cooling Systems," a subject in which they are widely recognized authorities. Both are now on the faculty of the University of California mechanical engineering department, of which Mr. Raber is chairman.

Long-Time Staff Member Retires

Miss Ada Gibson, a staff member of the University of Nebraska Extension Division since shortly after its organization, retired last week.

A member of the division staff since Feb., 1922, Miss Gibson helped establish the university's high school correspondence program in 1929, the first such work offered in the U.S. She taught English for the division.

Miss Gibson was honored by over 100 of her fellow workers in the Extension Division Tuesday at tea, at which time she was presented with a gift.
