Forum Features Ag Youth Group

The Ag Interdenominational Youth Fellowship program this Sunday evening will feature a forum of college students discussing the topic "One in Ten Thousand." After the forum, a cost supper will be served, followed by recreation and group singing.

Everyone is cordially invited to attend the meetings held at 5:30 in the First Evangelical United Brethren church every Sunday evening. The church is located at 33rd and Starr streets, just one block south of the southwest corner of Ag campus.

Training unit at Nebraska. The dance soon became a popular annual affair. Attendance has exceeded 800.

Dr. V. W. Lambert, new dean of Ag college, is greeted on his first day of duty by Dr. F. G. Keim, who has been acting as dean since the resignation of W. W. Burr last spring. Dr. Lambert assumes his new position today.

Lambert Assumes Ag Duties Today

Former Researcher Successor to Burr

Dr. W. V. Lambert, an alum of '21, will officially assume his duties as the new dean of the college of agriculture Friday. Dean Lambert relieves Dr. Frank Keim who has been Acting Dean since W. W. Burr retired last spring. The new dean will also be director of the agricultural experiment station at the University of Nebraska.

Long regarded as an authority in animal husbandry, the new head comes directly from the post of Director of the Agricultural

Griswold Plans Talk in Union Tuesday at 11

Nebraska's former Gov. Dwight Griswold will address members of the University student body and faculty body in the Student Union ballroom Tuesday morning at 11 a. m.

Mr. Griswold's subject will be "Report on Greece." As head of the American Mission to Greece, Griswold had control of American aid to that country and is recognized as an expert on foreign aid control.

Sunday's Daily Nebraskan will carry further comment on Griswold's appearance in the Union.

A capacity crowd welcomed the former governor back from his long tour of duty in Greece at a chamber of commerce luncheon sponsored by the Kiwanis club.

research administration of the U. S. department of agriculture in Washington, D. C., sometimes referred to as the "world's greatest civilian research agency."

Native Nebraskan

The new dean, a native Nebraskan, has traveled widely over the U. S. as head of the agricultural research administration. He has visited all the land-grant colleges and has first hand knowledge of their operations. His job has been the over-all direction of over 200 laboratories and research stations in the U. S. and in some foreign lands.

"We in Nebraska are indeed fortunate in having Dr. Lambert join our staff," Chancellor Gustavson said. "He is without doubt one of the nation's topflight research men. He is an able and recognized administrator, known in the midwest, and will bring a wealth of experience to the state and the University of Nebraska."

Dr. Lambert was born at Stella, Neb., in 1897, and was brought up on a farm prior to attending the University of Nebraska college of agriculture where he received his bachelor's degree in 1921. He took his master's at Kansas State college in Manhattan, and his doctor's degree at the University of California.

Served Many Groups

Dr. Lambert has served on many national and international agricultural groups. He was a member of the United States delegation to the food and agriculture organization of the United Nations at Copenhagen in 1946 and again at the Geneva conference in 1947.

He is a member of the board of alternates on the president's scientific research board, a member of the government's inter-department committee on science, a member of the Mexican-United States agricultural commission.

He belongs to Sigma Xi, Phi Kappa Phi, Gamma Sigma Delta, Alpha Zeta, and a host of national scientific groups.

The new dean will reside at 4027 Holdrege street with his wife and two daughters, Marilyn, 22, and Ann, 18. Mrs. Lambert is also a native of Nebraska, and attended school here.

Council Approves ISA Constitution

The constitution's committee of the student council approved on Thursday, the constitution of the Independent Students association, according to Chairman of the Committee Bill Schenck.

Formerly the unaffiliated student's association, the ISA has changed its name and amount of membership dues.

Pub Board
The publications board will meet Tuesday, Oct. 5, at noon for luncheon in the Union. Editors and business managers of the three campus publications are invited to attend.

Tense Climax Thrills Crowd As 'Waiting for Lefty' a Hit

BY FRANK JACOBS

No punches were pulled last night as an overflow crowd saw the Experimental Theatre successfully open their dramatic season with the intense social drama of the middle thirties, Clifford Odets' "Waiting for Lefty."

The drama, a brutal saga of depression-weary metropolitan life, was mainly a picture of the struggles of desperate taxicab drivers but was visably inoculated by appropriately-placed shots of Eastern philosophy.

The stage was the platform of a typical, smoky, bare hackie's union hall. Uniquely staged each intense flashback was the result of superb lighting.

Cabbies Speak

The play began and ended on a note of brilliant oration; the first an earnest plea by Joe Mitchell, played by Jack MacDonald, the latter a fiery demand by Agate, Abe Katz.

The skillfully-handled scenes mounted from climax to climax, culminating in an unsurpassable bit of stagecraft by Katz, as Agate, the man who wore an empty socket for an eye to denote his position "deep down in the working class." When word was brought that Lefty, who is waited for until the final scene, had been shot in the street, the crowd is driven to strike at last.

Perhaps the finest bit of interpretation ever heard on Experimental Theatre stages was displayed through Katz's enactment of the savagely-emotioned Agate. So stunned was the audience, after his closing speech, that a definite hush was noticeable following the curtain-lowering. But that did not prevent the standing-room crowd from claiming the cast for four curtain calls.

Play Has Realistic Beginning.

The audience was given an indeed realistic introduction to the ensuing struggle. In perhaps, the all-around best-enacted scene of the play, MacDonald and Elaine Lamphear portrayed a turbulent scene of domestic furor. As Edna, a hard-bitten, disagreeable woman, whose children "had never tasted a grapefruit," she gave a hard, almost too hard, impression of the depression-exhausted wife of 1935.

Proving their dramatic merit in the diversified flashbacks, were Temple veteran Gay Marr, understanding in the role of Dr. Barnes; Gladys Jackson, as the refreshing producer's secretary, and John Woodin, sincerely playing his part of the spineless strike-breaker. John McEroy capably carried the main role of the crooked union official, Fatt, throughout the production.

Ticket Mixup . . .

Above are two tickets sold for the same stadium seat. One was sold to student Bob Bush, the other to a non-student.

Bush was confronted at the Iowa State game by a non-student who claimed the seat. An investigation of the tickets showed that they were for the same seat. Other students have reported the same situation.
