

Block and Bridle Member Applications Now Available

Applications for the Block & Bridle club are now available to students on Ag campus, according to Bob Hamilton, president.

Men students with a sophomore standing or above are eligible for membership. Prospective candidates are selected with respect to scholarship and leadership abilities.

The main activities of the club include the sponsoring of the Livestock Judging teams and promoting of the Junior Ak-Sar-Ben show and honors banquet. In addition to these, members foster spirit and leadership on Ag campus.

All applications must be submitted before Oct. 30, and can now be filed at Room 201 of Animal Husbandry Hall. Prof. M. A. Alexander urges students who are interested to apply now.

Filley Retains Grange Office

Dr. H. C. Filley, chairman of the University of Nebraska rural economics department, was re-elected overseer of the Nebraska State Grange at the organization's annual meeting held on the college of agriculture campus this week.

All officers will be installed on the closing day of the 1948 Grange session Thursday.

Highlighting this year's Grange session will be a "fun-feed" banquet, sponsored by the Goehner Grange on Ag campus Thursday night.

Speaking before the Grange Tuesday, Bryan V. Holmes, re-elected State Grange master from Milburn, hit at "some" city newspapers and magazines charging them with over-emphasizing the price support program on agricultural products thus "leaving the impression that this is the main reason for the high price of food."

Food prices, Holmes stated, are high, but not as high relatively as non-farm income. Food that cost the average consumer 23 percent of his income in 1939 now would cost 20 percent of current income, he said.

Aggie-Culture by Keith Frederickson

I asked for comment in my first column last week, and I was overjoyed to receive some just the other day on the recent Farmers Formal. And, as promised, I will pass on the bit of information.

This person was interested in the administration of the annual rustic dance, and he was convinced that the recent presentation of the queen was worse than usual. As a remedy for some confusion, he suggests that the students of the campus be allowed more of a hand in planning the event. "After all," he counters, "isn't the Exec board supposed to represent the campus?"

I gather he means that there are times when the campus could better represent itself, and, if so, his point is well taken. I'm sure the Exec Board would be happy to be relieved of some of the responsibility for the dance, excluding, of course, finances.

Ag college freshman really asserted themselves at the Ak-Sar-Ben show in Omaha last week. Two active 4-H men from the campus, Glenn Moritz of Lexington and Clayton Yuetter of Eustis came up with duplicate fine performances.

Glenn received a purple ribbon for his lamb at the show and was also judged grand champion sheew showman for the contest. Clayton received a purple ribbon for his Hereford heifer, and received the grand champion cattle showman award.

Both men are from Dawson county and have competed in 4-H together for several years. Previous to the Omaha show, they had been named gold medal showmen at the State Fair, and they also exhibited prize winning stock there.

Alice Mathauser, ag union social director, wants to clarify a couple points for students in general. She says she is in favor of students making themselves at home in the union but if they put their feet on chairs, drop ashes on rugs, and wear hats at home, I'd just as soon they would not become adjusted here."

As a former janitor, (and, of late, a prime offender), I know whereof she speaks. The mess that is created in the union lounge seems unusual for civilized people.

But are college students really civilized?
