

Coeds Hear Lecture On Job-Hunting

Advice to students who will be looking for jobs when they have finished their college education was the highlight of Mrs. Donald D. Van Vliet's address at the convocation on "Careers for Women" Tuesday.

The three points which she emphasized were choosing a career, preparing for it, and finally knowing how to go out and get a job in that particular field.

Tells How to Apply

Mrs. Van Vliet's address with specific advice when going through a training period, and when applying for a position. "When interviewing," she said, "employers like to see a written list of the applicants' qualifications and accomplishments in that particular field, and he also will want to know why the applicant feels that she will be fitted for the job."

Marriage and a career can generally be worked out with some reservations, according to Mrs. Van Vliet. Each individual naturally has separate problems which must be worked out to fit the situation, she said.

Speaker Is Girl Scout Advisor

Mrs. Van Vliet is a Girl Scout advisor on professional work from New York City. She joined the Girl Scout organization in 1943. Since that time she has traveled widely in the United States, conferring with city and regional Girl Scout groups on the selection and placement of professional personnel.

Previously Mrs. Van Vliet, who graduated from Smith College, was associated with the United States Employment Service.

How simple can this Latin course be? Explanations are so clear. For instance, we're told by our teacher in easily understood terms, "a periphraasis is simply a circumlocution."
