

Freshmen Coeds to Glimpse Activities at Mart Monday

"AWS—AWS—AWS. As one freshman to another, just what does that mean? Is it a new Husker chant, advertising for a cigarette company, or, perhaps, something you say when the food isn't good?"

"Naw, Gert, ya got it all wrong," Min said. "Everyone knows that AWS is a club—it's the sister organization of the AGR'S."

"AW, Snap out of it," (AWS, get it. Paid advertisement.) the solemn sophomore said. (Alliteration, see. I been writing a paper on a pome and ya get so ya notice things like that.) "AWS stands for Amalgamated Whooping Snoops. The AWS is a club devised by some frustrated soul who found that she could not be a big wheel on the campus without someone's aid. The founder was undoubtedly a kind of socializing type who wanted some recognition besides a perfect attendance record at the Delta Beta Kappa house. That's AWS."

Senior Appears

- Well, along about that time some senior came wandering in. (Seniors do have a tendency to look lost, don't you think? It's part of a guilt complex from cutting so many classes and then meeting the professor the next hour.) "AWS?" the senior said. "AWS—who wants to know about AWS?"

"We do," the freshmen chorused enthusiastically. (Ah, enthusiasm—the one virtue freshmen seem to possess.)

"All right," said the senior, taking a deep breath and hacking twice. "Listen, then, AWS stands for Associated Women Students, an organization of and for women students, just as the name suggests. The reason everyone's been talking about AWS lately is because tomorrow it's going to open its big activity mart."

What's Activity Mart?

"Activity mart?" Gert repeated. "What's that?"

"Well, probably the best way to find out about it would be to see it for yourself from 4:45, to 6 p.m. Monday afternoon in the Union ballroom," the senior said.

"Oh, now I remember," cried the sophomore, coming to life—a lamentable trait of members of that class. "I got herded up there last year with all the other freshmen. All the clubs and publications on campus have booths and all of them try to sign up the good workers. I remember how crushed I was when they told me that The Daily Nebraskan already had an editor. I joined the YWCA, though, and had lots of fun in my commission group — learned plenty, too."

Activities for All

"That's right," the senior said.

"There are activities to suit every person. Unaffiliated students will be interested in the Independent Students' association and BABW. And many girls will find a place for themselves in Student Foundation, or Women's Athletic association, or as workers for the "Rag" or Cornhusker. Later on there's the chance to be a Tassel or a Coed Counselor. These are just a few of the activities which will be represented at the mart." And the moral to this little story is—see ya there!

Operation

Costume Design

Do you have your idea on paper? If so turn it in to Room 110, Military Science Building before Friday at 4 p. m., Oct. 29. There are only six days left for students to enter the Cadet Officers' contest for re-designing the Honorary Colonel's uniform. Today is D-11.

Clinic to Examine Nebraska Youths

About eighty York county school children with educational handicaps such as speech and hearing difficulties will be examined here Friday and Saturday by a traveling clinic from the university.

The youngsters were referred to the clinic by teachers with the consent of parents.

In charge of the university clinic are Dr. L. T. Laase, head of the speech department, and Dr. D. W. Worcester, head of the educational psychology and measurements department.
