

Business Bureau Reports Teacher Wages Too Low

University Business Research bureau, an agency of the Business Administration college, has reported that wages being paid public school employees and other government workers in America are keeping pace with the cost of living.

The bureau said thus far in 1948 the national cost of living index stands at 169. The comparable wage index for all public school employees stands at 168.7. For the same period in 1948, the wages of non-school government employes ranked as follows: state 173.7, county 167.2 and city 158.5.

Bureau Reports Average Wages.

Reports of the bureau say that the average annual wages, expressed in money, for the various brackets for the U. S. include: all school employes $2,137; state, $2,324; city, $2,135; and county, $1,995. Average wages of workers in industry in Nebraska are $2,450.

"Private wages and salaries are well ahead of the cost of living and of public compensation," Dr. Edgar Z. Palmer, bureau director, reported. "This means public employment is probably losing its better workers to private concerns and that the quality of public service is likely to deteriorate.

Programs to Result in Poorer Service

"Economy programs which propose further to exploit public workers by lowering their pay will only result in poorer and poorer public service. The difference in pay in public employment appears on the average to be lower than in private fields for work which in many cases carries a high degree of responsibility. If we are going to allow our price to fluctuate as they have been doing, we should also see to it that our public service is not ruined in the process," Dr. Palmer said.
