Red Cross Urges Christmas Programs by Houses, Clubs

Special Christmas projects by organized houses and groups at local institutions are being urged by the Red Cross college unit.

Eugene Berg, president of the group, and Jean Fenster, institutional projects chairman, have formulated a plan for the houses and clubs to follow in carrying out the holiday program.

Pointing out that the number of local homes makes an extensive participation necessary, Berg and Miss Fenster have invited student groups to become interested in their local community and its needs.

"Students who participate in this friendship program will help the people in the city and state institutions, besides bringing a new satisfaction and awareness to themselves," they emphasized. "We will claim a brighter holiday season for ourselves by helping to brighten their Christmas tide."

Local institutions including the Veteran's hospital, the Children's Orthopedic hospital, the State hospital, and other local homes are eager to open their doors to student groups.

Possibilities for group activities include caroling, gift distribution, skits, visits, decorations, and special ward shows. These projects can be keyed to the individual institution and its personnel such as veterans, little boys, and elderly women.

Houses and groups have been asked to take immediate action on the special Christmas projects. Miss Fenster asks that a group contact her when a choice is made from the local homes, so that a practical calendar can be set up for the projects. Her phone number is 2-6413.

Other members of the Unit committee which formulated the "good will to men" institutional Christmas projects are Frank Jacobs, Audrey Rosenbaum, and Margo Nootz.
