

Universities And Colleges Present Their Share Of News Highlights Throughout the Country

Besides Freshman Beauty contests being held on campuses throughout the nation colleges and universities have their share of other news highlights and sidelights.

A glance through: The Iowa State Daily showed that a Courtesy Week poll of housemothers said the students' greatest fault was their poor sidewalk manners. "Men are thoughtlessly rough, and girls pay too much attention to conversation and ignore passersby."

Colorado's Silver and Gold disclosed that a narrow margin of 75 votes defeated the honor code in balloting by the Arts and Science students. The commissioner of academic affairs said that since the students didn't desire this method it is necessary for effective proctoring which will "assure the honest student of an even break on his exams."

Daily Californian reported that while students studied for finals 60 skeletons were found. These were found, incidentally, not by the students, but by an archeological survey financed by the Board of Regents. Other things besides skeletons were on the schedule, though, including plans for $6.5 million worth of new buildings.

Collegian of K-State revealed that the radio's Hit Parade favorite, "Sunflower," has been suggested as the official sweetheart song by the Collegian's staff.

Assuming a protective attitude, the "Advice-to-innocent-young-maidens-desiring-to-remain-that-way Department": Never go into a barn with a fellow who looks as if he had lofty ideas.

New Mexico Lobo proved that "keep-off-the-grass" signs can be humorous. Such examples as "Keep the grass for smooching," "Only manure goes here," and "Don't ruin the gay young blades" were enough to blow down the student before he cut across the lawn, but failed to completely stop him.

The Indiana Daily Student indicated that there will soon be "lady rasslers," if campus girls continue to show so much interest in the grapplers' sport. During the Big Nine meet, I. U. winners were awarded with medals which were presented by campus beauties. Who said it isn't becoming a woman's world?

Kosmet Klub. Union Will Lend Famous Paintings to Students

To enable students interested in art to further their knowledge in the field of paintings, Kosmet Klub, in conjunction with the Union is sponsoring a picture lending library.

Original funds for this library were donated by the Kosmet Klub. The selections were made by the University Art Department, and purchased and framed by them. The donation was made a year ago, although the service was not offered until this fall.

ALL OF THE works are by well known artists. The collection contains such selections as: "Sunset" by John Marin; "Stone City," by Grant Wood; "Bridge at Arles," by Vincent Van Gogh; "Woman in White," by Pablo Picasso; "The Tornado," by Winslow; and others.

The Union maintains the collection. This year the Union has made additional purchases, and several individuals have made contributions. The library is rapidly expanding. Any prints donated will be so marked.

THIS PICTURE lending program is not exclusive with University of Nebraska. Several other large schools such as the University of Minnesota have even more complete collections to offer.

Pictures are available to students free of charge for one semester. Several pictures are still available. Anyone may apply at the Union Activities office.

The House Rules Committee, Bob Metrakos, sponsor, and Gene Dyer, chairman, is in charge of the library.

Semantics Students Receive Advice from Professor Intellect

Professor Dubious Intellect issued an official concoction of the second semantics section of the first philosophy fragment last night after the die-annual philosophy feast around the new Burnett totem hall.

Speaking as head of the philosophy department and as low "As students of s-e-m-a-n-t-i-c-s (he spelled the word because he wasn't sure of its pronunciation, for philosophers aren't sure of anything and semanticists aren't sure that they're not sure of anything) we must remember, we must remember, well, we must remember. At any rate memory is important."

I Remember

"Oh, I remember what I was trying to remember," he cried. After wiping his tears, he continued, "Students of semantics must remember to study semantics. They must also remember the importance of the connotation of words. As my old friend S. I. Hawakawa puts it in his book, Language in Action, there is a slight difference between a

"choise piece of filet mignon" and a "hunk of dead cow."

"But in my book I use original examples to elaborate on that point. My examples are so funny Bob Hope almost died laughing when he heard them. Well, maybe he didn't almost die laughing, but he almost died. For instance, I say 'old cranks' instead of 'faculty members.' I use 'flunks' instead of 'ones' and I use 'old bag' instead of 'young woman.'"

Write It Rag

"I write 'Rag' instead of 'Daily Nebraskan' and use 'corn' instead of 'cornshucks.' Furthermore, I use 'innocent' instead of 'not innocent.'"

Falling off his totem pole, he concluded, "Ugh! Just send me two boxes of wheaties and I'll be able to eat breakfast again!"

Never go around with a married woman unless you can go two rounds with her husband.

Wife (to late retiring husband): "Is that you, dear?"

Husband: "It had better be me!"
