Challenge . . .

As usual, the student body is doing a lot of talking.

As usual, the student body is not acting.

Dr. Rosenlof has sent letters to all organized houses asking for room and board, or room, for one foreign student for a year. Few groups have made replies to this letter.

As a result of a meeting held by the Council's committee on bringing displaced persons to the campus with representatives of organized houses and religious groups, the Council has been promised considerable backing in its project. The International Religious Organization of the U. N. has assured the transportation of foreign students to the United States. The Presbyterian Student House has pledged funds to pay for transportation of such students to Ne-

The prospect of tuition for these students by the administration has a hopeful outlook. The students have never failed to take advantage of an opportunity to criticize the administration, but have they shown even half the interest displayed by the administration in this matter? We urge that all organized houses seriously think about making room for a foreign student. Consider how proud the University might feel if every house could provide room and board for a foreign student for a year. Consider what it would mean to the student. It would be the end of a life of privation and homelessness. It would mean the beginning of a bright outlook on life, the chance for a decent home, the chance for an education. During the recent UNESCO conference we obtained a glimpse of the tremendous task faced world peace if we don't give these people a chance for education, prosperity and a high standard of living? Some groups will be selfish enough to ask, "What will we gain by providing room for a displaced person?" You will receive the undying gratitude of a foreign student who is given a chance in the world. His presence in an organized house would certainly contribute to our understanding of

Methodists Fete Orphans Tuesday

Fifteen to twenty orphans from White Hall will be given a party at the Methodist Student House Tuesday evening. Hosts and hostesses will be the Methodist boys club, Delta Sigma Theta, and the girls club, Kappa Phi.

The party is an annual affair, ordinarily sponsored by Kappa Phi at Christmas time. Because of the many parties held for the orphans at Christmas, it was decided to hold a party with an Easter theme this year.

Plans for the party, including games and refreshments, are being made by Kappa Phi, with Bonita Kirkman in charge of arrangements, Transportation for the orphans will be provided by the Delta Sigma Thetas.

Introducing . . .

A week ago we started a series of editorials to introduce staff members for the specific purpose of identifying the people who put out the Rag so that those who would throw rocks at them won't be endangering any innocent bystander by any fault of mistaken identity. This is item number two.

A quiet but effective whip-cracker is our second managing editor, Fritz Simpson. A major in journalism and son of a "daily" publisher-editor, Fritz has been exposed to the newspaper business for a long time.

Editor of both his high school newspaper and yearbook in Atlantic, Iowa, Fritz spent his freshman year at NU as a reporter for the Daily Nebraskan, specializing in sports news. He was appointed at the end of his first semester sophomore year as sports editor, served as a news editor last semester and now sits in the slot as managing editor.

Like all staff members, Fritz has a few campaigns of his own. One of them has to do with the Rag itself-improvement, that is. Another and health insurance by pay roll major one is a matter of final exams.

Fritz would like to see the University enlarge The Daily Nebraskan. Thus, many of the difficulties that naturally arise from having to print the paper "off campus" would be eliminated, and there would be opportunity for University students to learn the operations of a newspaper plant from the composing room angle.

Fritz views final exams as a headache, espe-Fritz Simpson cially with all the cheating practices they seem to invoke. He would rather see a series of hour exams in a course-minimum of four-with the "final" coming on the last day the class meets, counting no more than the other hour exams.

What other projects Fritz may have in mind will save for future editorials. So when Fritz isn't dispensing of reporters with hot news tips or threatening news editors to "get those stories in!" he will probably be tracking down reports which lead to good editorial material.

Our informal "Friendlies" are held from 4 to 5:30 p.m. each Wednesday afternoon. We devote them to "being friendly" and to getting acquainted. Sometime we pop corn in the fireplace, roast marshmellows or just talk and sing," Mrs. Benson says.

As at many student houses on campus, Cotner House is open during the day for Christian students to spend their free hours studying or meeting their friends.

AN IMPORTANT PROJECT at the house is the plan for displaced students. The first religious group on campus to definitely commit itself on the proplans about the program. The Christian students will pay for transportation from New York to Nebraska for one displaced student. Arrangements will also be special invitation is extended to University students and faculty for the annual Christian Scientist visitors' night service Thursday evening, March 16. This service is held each spring to acquaint visitors with the Christian Science religion.

Sponsored by the Christian Science organization of the University, the meeting will be held in Room 313, Union, and will include testimonies, experiences and remarks on Christian Science. The meeting is conducted by a reader elected from the membership.

This organization was recognized on the Nebraska campus by the mother church in Boston in 1915. It has met once each week since that time except for a brief period during the war. A reception is held on campus each September for interested students.
