50 Years of Home Ec . . .

Just what has 50 years of Home Economics at the University of Nebraska meant? On the surface, the golden anniversary of this department may mean only 50 years of experience, and nothing more.

But to the 300 girls who are now receiving training for the greater happiness of their future homes or for a profession bright with opportunity, this anniversary means much more. It means 50 years of progress made toward modern methods and equipment so that their years in school may be full of fun and modern learning, and so that their degree from the University of Nebraska Home Economics department will mean something in the outer world.

To the nearly 2,000 women who have received their degrees in the past 50 years from this department, the anniversary has meant a homecoming to the alma mater to find it progressing beyond all expectations each year. It means returning to the department that they loved and which gave them near complete preparation for the lives they have found since.

To the first head of the department and the two since, these 50 years have marked progress beyond their dreams in the field in which they placed their whole lives and hopes.

The first 50 years have come and gone. In the next 50 years more progress is inevitable. Perhaps the centennial celebration will be celebrated by a "College of Home Economics."

Letterip

Dear Editor:

Mr. Eads' letter for the Faction in Thursday's Daily Nebraskan was of great interest to me. It was only to be expected that a Faction answer to my letter would take these lines. What other defense is open to them?

I find myself in agreement with Mr. Eads on only one point—I am most certainly not a member of the All-University party. My sentiments do not now, and never will lie with a small group of highly organized individuals who seek to promote and maintain their own interests through the exclusion of the unorganized majority. American foreign and domestic policy is devoted to the eradication of just such political groups throughout the world, but here we find a group that voted solidly against NSA on the grounds that it was communist-controlled, using tactics which are generally associated with world communism.

I must also agree that I speak from "ignorance of the facts" concerning the All-University party—but who doesn't? So far no one has officially announced the aims of the All-University party. Probably they realize that to do so would only stir up more antagonism.

But though the facts are not known, it is easy enough to see from the history of the Faction and the nature of the new Faction All-University party, that this party is setup with one view only in mind—TO CONTINUE FACTION DOMINATION OF THE CAMPUS. Can this be denied?

One might even say that Mr. Eads admitted this when he said that it appears that "the Student party aims only at wresting control of campus offices from the fraternities." Of course he goes on to say that "there is no faction monopoly." But "monopoly" and the "practical monopoly" of which I spoke are two different things. It obviously wouldn't be practical to use monopoly control to put Faction men in every office. An absolute monopoly doesn't stay practical for long. Need I bother to point out that Mr. Eads' letter almost completely bysteps an answer to my accusation that the All-University party is merely a new front organization to continue Faction domination of the campus?

If the Faction wishes to rest its case on Mr. Eads' letter (and it appears to me that this might well be the basis of the All-University party platform) and on the actions of the Student Council which it mentions, I am sure the Student party will willingly take issue with it. Of course it will be hard to campaign against a plank of the platform which so dramatically calls attention to itself as the street light on 14th and S (witness the crowds and traffic jams which line up to watch it at noon), but I'm sure the Student party can find some answer to that.

Before I close I cannot but point out that the main leadership in the Student Council has been furnished by people who have challenged the domination of the Faction—including Dale Ball, who with his fraternity, took the very courageous step of leaving the Faction; Bev Sievers, Phyllis Cadwallader, Barbara Speer, Louise McDill, Shirley King and Roz Howard. The Faction may be able to claim credit for getting them in, but recent events indicate that it is displeased by its lack of ability to control their minds and votes as it does some of the rest of the Council.

Truman's legislative request for European Recovery in the form of five billion dollars was approved by the Senate late Friday afternoon. The plan is just an authorization bill, setting a limit on the fund, but not actually appropriating the money. The bill was passed with all the changes the administration requested.

THE RECENT agreement to set up a western German republic and other events, said Secretary of State Dean Acheson, are all pointing toward a better outlook of the world situation. The main point of the other is the signing of the North Atlantic Security Alliance.

CHINA'S Acting President Li Tsung-jen offered to give his life Friday if it would aid peace talks. And this dramatic offer had appeared to move the Communists enough that more negotiation might result instead of more fighting.

THE CONSUMER will figure heavily in the passage of the Agriculture plan, Secretary of Agriculture Brannan believed.

Truman Aide Will Speak on U.S. Business

John D. Clark, member of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, will speak in the Union ballroom Wednesday, April 13, at 2 p. m.

Speaking on the topic of "The Business Outlook," Clark has a vast background in economics, law, political science and business.

A GRADUATE of the University of Nebraska, Clark received his A.B. degree and his LL.D. here and then continued to receive his LL.B. at Columbia and his Ph.D. at Johns Hopkins.

Dr. Clark also taught in the Department of Economics at NU from 1934 to 1937, and was made dean of the College of Business Administration at the University of Nebraska from 1941 to 1946. He also has taught at Denver, Colo.

HAVING SERVED on the Wyoming legislature in 1941, he was also a member of the Wyoming Council of Defense and the Nebraska State Development committee. Going further into the field of politics, he was a delegate to the Democratic National convention and was later made advisor to the U.S. Senate committee on governmental reorganization.

In 1943 he was president of the American Finance association. He has also served as president of the Midwest Refining company, director of the Bank of Cheyenne and director of the Omaha branch of the Federal Reserve bank.
