

VA Cuts Down On Red Tape For Veterans

Veterans training under the GI Bill, as well as their schools and training establishments, will have less paper work to do under a simplified plan to go into effect April 1st.

According to Ashley Westmoreland, Lincoln regional office manager, after the first of April, VA will no longer require monthly progress reports for veterans in job-training establishments and in schools other than colleges and universities. Schools below college level also will report veterans progress and conduct on VA report of earnings.

"As in the past," Westmoreland said, "colleges and universities will not submit a report of conduct or progress except in those cases where the student's conduct or progress is unsatisfactory."

The VA official emphasized that schools and training establishments should continue to report promptly the dropping of any veteran from schooling. He also urged vets to make certain that the required reports reach the VA regional office immediately after the first of the month following the reporting period.

The new one-page report is simple. The vet merely provides the necessary information, signs his name and turns the form over to the official of his school who reports on his conduct and progress.

People who live in glass houses near volcanoes shouldn't.

"Give up and marry," says a justice of the peace to bachelors. How's that again? "Marry and give up." That's what we thought.
