Med College In Danger of Losing Rating

The University Medical college is in danger of losing its recognition by the American Medical association.

Dr. Harold C. Leuth, dean of the med school, made that warning this week-end in a statement to the Nebraska press.

Dr. Leuth said that the Omaha college's position is based on a recent inspection tour of the school by an AMA committee. Their recommendations were practically "an ultimatum" to raise the school's standards, said Dr. Leuth.

"OUR DILEMMA is clear-cut and simple," he commented. "It is entirely a financial problem."

"In recent years, the budgets allotted by the state legislature have made it impossible for us to keep up with the expansion of teaching, hospital and research facilities achieved by neighboring state medical centers.

If Nebraska is to retain its AMA standing, more full-time teachers for pre-clinical and clinical students, more outside grants for research and a new 80-bed wing to the hospital are needed," said Dr. Leuth.

Haugseth Heads Corn Shucks Art

Jan Haugseth was appointed art editor of Corn Shucks humor magazine Saturday morning by the Publications board.

Her name was omitted from the report of the new staff selection in yesterday's Daily Nebraskan.

Miss Haugseth is well-known to Corn Shucks readers for her cartoons, such as the two-page "The Union—When Mr. Lake Isn't Looking." She has been a frequent contributor to the magazine during the year.

University Gets Budget Increase

Legislature Appropriates $8 Million by 25-6 Vote

An eight million dollar budget for the University was approved, 25 to 6, by the state legislature Monday. This is a $600,000 increase over the budget committee recommendation, but a two million dollar cut in the University's original budget.

NU Teacher Leaves for Iowa State

Dr. Margaret I. Liston of the Home Economics department will leave Nebraska in September to become professor of Home Economics at Ames, Iowa.

Since 1938, Miss Liston has served as associate professor of Home Economics here at Nebraska. She has taught in the fields of family and consumption economics, home management and housing.

She received her doctor's degree this spring from the University of Chicago, having received her earlier training at Iowa State.

Before coming to Nebraska, she taught at Indiana State Teachers college and at an experiment station in Vermont. She has participated in several research studies.

At Iowa State, her work will be mainly confined to instructing graduate students in the field of consumption and family economics. She will begin her work there September 16.

Zoology Prof Funeral Rites Planned Today

Funeral services will be held today for Dr. William D. Webster, University zoology instructor, who died Friday at a local hospital.

Christian church of Bethany will be the scene of the 2 p. m. services with the six senior members of the zoology department acting as honorary pallbearers.

THE HONORARY pallbearers will be Dr. David D. Whitney, Dr. Irving H. Blake, Dr. Harold W. Manter, Dr. Otis Wade, Dr. Eugene F. Powell and Dr. Dwight D. Miller.

Dr. Webster's death Friday was attributed to heart trouble, and came as "a great surprise and shock," according to department associates.

"Dr. Webster was a very hard and conscientious worker," said Dr. Blake Monday, "and his death is both a professional and personal loss to the department. Well-liked in the department of zoology, he had a number of intimate friends who often felt that his great worth was unrealized because of his very quiet, retiring manner."

DR. WEBSTER was 65 years old and had been a Nebraska faculty member since 1931. He received his Ph. D. here and served as an instructor in zoology. He taught during his life at Ohio State, Washington Square college of New York, Kentucky Military institute, Illinois Wesleyan and the University of Illinois.

He was a native of South Carolina. He received his B. S. degree at Guilford college of North Carolina and his A. M. at Columbia.

The increase was recommended last week by Gov. Val Peterson and Sen. John Callan, chairman of the budget committee, after a conference with University officials.

The motion to allow the raise in the University's 1949-51 operating budget was made by Sen. Ed Hoyt of McCook. Hoyt stated that the increase would raise the state levy by less than one-fourth of a mill.

DEBATE ON the budget lasted nearly two hours.

Attacking the increase, Sen. W. J. Williams of Ravenna, budget committee member, said, "There is no question the legislature yielded to pressure, and plenty of it. The thing in my mind is the ability of the taxpayer to pay."

"With grain and livestock prices going down, we're headed for trouble. I hope you men will vote your convictions and not let a pressure group tell you what to do."

Williams also attacked the Lincoln Journal for editorials pertaining to the University budget.

SENATOR CALLAN, backing the increase said, "I don't see why we wouldn't be justified in asking the federal government to help subsidize the college in view of the fact the armed forces are taking most of our graduates and few of them stay in the state."

Sen. N. F. Schroeder, Hoskins, asked Callan to explain why the University needed an increase of $1,400,000 over its budget for the current biennium.

Callan said that $600,000 is needed by the University for salary raises, $1,037,000 for equipment and new buildings and that the University expects a $600,000 decrease in tuition fees.

SEN. JOHN ADAMS, Omaha, questioned the necessity of raising the salaries of instructors.

"There have been some good raises in the past few years," Callan replied. "You can't judge the University by the dollar sign or the salaries paid. If you're going to recognize the University on the basis of its salaries, then I don't know the answer."

Adams asked if Callan meant that the state can't afford to finance the University.

"I'm not saying that," Callan answered, "but I do say we have reached the limit until we broaden the tax base."

SEN. WILLARD Wilson, Holdrege, stated that the results of research at Ag college alone bring in more income than the cost of operating the entire University. He also said that Nebraska has lost many instructors because of low salaries.

Sen. Earl Lee, Fremont, also commented on the resignation of instructors who desired positions with higher pay.

"We in Nebraska can't afford to lack in the education field," he said.

Sen. John Davis, Lincoln, commented, "the return from agricultural research amounts to $113 for each one dollar spent."

Law Professor to Assist Senator This Summer

Professor of Law Julius Cohen has been appointed administrative assistant to U. S. Senator Neely, democrat from West Virginia, for the summer.

Cohen, who teaches legislative, administrative and labor law, is expected to return next fall.
