Exhibit Features Drawing by Pool

A drawing by Dr. R. J. Pool, University of Nebraska botanist, will provide the basis for a featured exhibit at the International Horticultural and Garden Exhibition to be held in London, England this summer.

Exhibition directors are using a drawing by Dr. Pool to prepare a working model of how plant life works. The drawing, prepared by Dr. Pool for one of his widely used university textbooks on botany, is designed to show in a graphic manner the structure of the world's greatest factory—the green plant which combines air, water and sunlight to produce its own development and seeds or fruits which feed man and animals and provide us with other essentials of living.

The same drawing has already appeared in several garden club publications and in bulletins of the soil conservation service of the U.S.D.A.

author, will head the lecture group. His subject will be "Goethe, His Personality and His Work." More than 30 other eminent scholars will take part in the convocation program.

The music festival will feature concerts by the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, Dimitri Mitropoulos conducting, and recitals by Erica Morini, Herta Glaz, Mack Harrell, Jerome Hines, Dorothy Maynor, Artur Rubinstein, Gregor Piatigorsky, Victor Babin and Vitya Vronsky.

Also scheduled are two round table discussions—"Goethe and Art Today" and "Ethics and Politics."

SPECIAL RATES for the convocation have been arranged for students and professors as low as $65 European plan for a ten-day period, including all lectures and concerts. Rates for the three-days series will vary between $21.50 and $30.000, depending upon choice of accommodations.

The second Tuesday series of the festival will be held July through July 16. All reservations can be made through the Goethe Bicentennial Convocation and Music Festival, Aspen, Colo.

All States Need 360 Quarts Of Ice Cream

Topflight high school students—260 of them—arrived on campus last Thursday to begin the ninth annual three week All-State course in music, speech and art. Their payments of $65 in fees touched off a chain reaction.

IN FIVE sorority houses, one fraternity, and one university dormitory, 548 clean sheets were flipped on 274 beds to help house the students and their advisors.

From the Union's catering offices, orders went out for 14,750 half pint bottles of milk, 1,000 loaves of bread, 5,400 eggs, 360 quarts of ice cream, 200 dozen sweetrolls, 1,789 pounds of meat and a ton and a half of potatoes.

A score of professors and instructors began the job of registration. Toots and tones fairly shook the sober faculty lounge as instrumental and vocal try-outs were held.

Carefully sounding their d's and g's, instructors outlined courses for more than 50 speech students.

AND FOR the first time, 17 students—four of them scholarship winners—were scheduled for courses in painting, drawing and sculpture.

Meanwhile, the young people themselves were busy renewing acquaintances and making new friends. The bookstore did a booming business in All-State T-shirts and beanies and the ping-pong room in the Union basement began to look like the Coliseum during a basketball game.

An open rehearsal of the band, chorus and orchestra Sunday afternoon was the first public performance of any of the groups. The first student recital is scheduled for Friday, June 17 at 7:30 p. m. in the Union ballroom.

Union Craft Shop Opens At 7 Tonight

Make it yourself!

That's the slogan of the Union craft shop which opens at 7 o'clock tonight.

The shop, located in the basement of the Union, will be under the direction of Miss Snell, former university instructor and crafts expert.

Students will have an opportunity to work with textile painting, block printing, cork, jewelry, dresden craft and metal in the shop.

The session will open with several demonstrations. Mrs. Meek, president of the Nebraska handweaver's guild, will demonstrate weaving and the construction of looms. Mrs. Ruth Coleman will demonstrate working with cork. Mrs. Lynn Cosgrove will display and explain working with tooled metals.

After the display periods students will be asked to select the type of materials they would like to work with. Materials may be purchased at cost. Equipment is furnished free of charge by the Union.
