

Vertical Xylophone Views Campus from Cosy Crate

Ding, dong!

Soon these and other delightful tones will sound forth from the campus' newest and most fashionable improvement, the carillon tower—affectionately termed the "Singing Silo" by a grateful student body.

The solid hunk of concrete, strategically placed between Morrill Hall, home of the deceased, and Bessey Hall, home of the lower classes of the living, is the gift of an NU alum.

Crated King . . .

SOON TO TOWER over the campus, this somewhat shapeless mass of concrete and wood will someday be the Carillon tower. This latest innovation in the campus face-lifting project is the gift of an NU alum. When completed the structure will reach 80 feet into the air. Bells will then be added to its upper regions and will fill the air with music, daily. The structure will probably be completed by fall.

The concrete emblem of alma mater fidelity seems to be a part of the campus beautification program. Its contribution will be more than its structure, however. The bells, which will be added to the tower, will peal holiday tunes, school songs and the hour of the day. Future students will trip to class to the "tintinabulation of the bells."

WHEN THE $85,000 which will eventually go into the tower's construction was donated to the University, a number of projects were envisioned. Someone suggested that an arch be erected at the corner of 12th and R streets. The money might also have been invested in wishing wells, sun dials and various other adornments.

A reliable source states that it was whispered in the Administration building that the money might be used for some constructive purpose. (The little man who is holding up the Pharmacy building might lean the other way one of these days and there seems to be some local talk about a new theater.)

BUT THE MONEY was donated for a memorial—of the luxury variety. So $85,000 was dumped into a cement mixer and in a few short weeks University of Nebraska students will be bounding over the campus to the "rhyming and the chiming of the bells, of the bells, bells, bells, bells, bells, bells, bells."

The repertoire for this atest of campus improvements might read something like this: First day of school—"There Is No Place Like Nebraska" (Augmented by apt comments from those who have been around for a year or two, with perhaps a dash of "School Days" thrown in for seasoning.)

First game—"Hail to the Team" (The mighty bells will laud the mighty men.) Homecoming—"Homestick" (with appropriate tears from visiting alumni) The Notre Dame game—"The Funeral Dirge" Thanksgiving—"Hymn of Praise" (reverently rendered) Christmas—"Jingle Bells" (what else?)

AND SO ON, with love songs for Valentin's Day, patriotic airs for the birthdays of our founding fathers, Mendelssohn for spring and Lohengrin for June. The bells may even replace the ivy and daisy chains with their "Who Will Plant the Ivy" chant. (It does have a tune doesn't it?)

Further selections might include "We're Having a Heat Wave" to toast frozen toesies in December and "Let It Snow" to

Olsen to Conduct All-State Band in Concert in Union

There's nothing like a band, as anyone who has ever tooted a horn or pounded a drum knows.

And as bands go, the All-State band is a pretty special one, for its members are the pick of outstanding high school musicians from all over Nebraska.

Johnny may be lead sax back in Podunk, and the apple of his director's eye, but in this outfit his talent's not so conspicuous—everyone's good. When some hundred or so good players get together two hours a day for nearly three weeks, something is bound to happen.

JUST WHAT the results of this intensive study are, will be shown Tuesday when the All-State band presents a concert at 7:30 p. m. in the Union ballroom. Walter Olsen, director of instrumental music at Fremont high school has been responsible for making the group of bandmen sound like one organization. At the concert both he and Lyle Welch, director of instrumental music at Whittier cool the overheated students during the summer session.

At present the sides of the structure are a bleak gray. Perhaps they will later be embellished with the physiognomy of the commemorated one. They may even boast inscriptions.

THERE IS little doubt, however that if the builders do not supply terse phrases for the enlightenment of future generations, the student populace will. Such phrases as "Joe loves Mary" and a series of Greek letters will undoubtedly appear on the tower's sleek sides in the not-too-distant future. Although everyone may not be able to chisel his initials on its gleaming surface future Cornhuskers may rest assured TNE will not permit the magnificent edifice to go untouched. (The red paint will blend nicely with the gray of the tower.)

With a third of its climb toward the heavens behind it, the completed structure (uncrated) will greet students in September. Ring out wild bells.

and Irving schools of Lincoln, will conduct the band.

A horn quartet and a trumpet trio are included in a program of well-varied band music. Bennett's "The Four Horns" will be played by two hornmen and two hornswomen—Kathryn Baker, Duane Young, Vivian Owen and Dennis Carroll. The trumpeters—Gerald Fairchild, William Miller and Richard Ralston—will perform Walters' "Fantasy for Three."

"AMERICAN Legion Forever," Morton Gould's stirring march, will open the program. It will be followed by Majesty, an overture by O'Neill, and "Little Norwegian Suite" by Hansen. The three parts of the suite are entitled "Saterjentens Songdag" (Herd Girl's Sunday), "Den Bakvende Visa" (An Awkward Song) and "Halling" (Dance).

Other selections include Weber's "Great Century March," "American Folk Rhapsody" by Grundeman; Anderson's "Jazz Pizzicato"; and Simon's "March of the Majorities."

Robert Harrison, Lincoln, is band president. Other officers are: Kathryn Baker, David City, vice-president; and Donn Cline, Central City, secretary-treasurer.

Professor Bare Gives Chigger Tips

Here's some tips from Prof. O. S. Bare of the entomology department on how to eliminate unwanted guest, Joe Chigger, from picnics and on the lawn:

The old remedy of dusting with sulphur at the rate of one pound per three square rods is one of the best—but some people don't like the sulphur odor. Another is 5 per cent chlordane dust—one pound to four square rods. A third is 10 per cent toxaphene dust—one-half pound to four square rods.

Professor Bare says a treatment with any of the materials usually is effective for two or three weeks.
