Well Modulated

By Dutch Meyers

We hope enough people read this column to have noticed that we are four days late this time. It seems that they're trying to get rid of me, and figure that that's the easiest way to do it. Incidentally, that guess about the mystery girl was made last Wednesday when we handed this column in for printing. Not bad, huh? George Wilcox tells us he reads our Friday witticisms. Well, that makes two anyway. The first campus roundup show, 9:30 p. m. KOLN, was aired last Tuesday, featuring campus news and an interview with Husker center Tom Novak. Authors of the Ages next Thursday will tell W. W. Jacobs' tale of the Monkey's Paw. If your life is dull and running short vertebrae cold flashes, this is your show. We're promised suspense and thrills. (9:30 p. m. Thurs. KFOR.)

The grapevine has it that the Simon's show is in for a change. We don't have the details yet, but the sound of "chatter" keeps echoing through the hallowed halls.

Those two characters running around the "Crib" every Tuesday with the wire recorder are Lois Nelson and Sandy Levy. They're working on a new show called "Coke date NU." The thing has possibilities.

Gridders Need Support . . .

Saturday about 40 strong and husky Cornhuskers travel to Manhattan to open their Big Seven competition against a surprising bunch of Kansas State Wildcats. A victory, from all portents, will be no easy thing.

To win, the Huskers will need all the spirit they've got. From indications, however, they will have to generate their own. Although hundreds of NU students plan to make the trip, they will lack any regular cheer-leaders, unless a few members of the cheer squad take it on themselves to go down.

It's lamentable that the school sends no cheerleaders to out of town games. A team on the road always has a handicap in playing before a hostile crowd. Even two or three cheerleaders, leading a small but hearty Nebraska rooting section, can do a lot toward giving the team that old college fight.

We would like to see some provision made for paying expenses for at least two cheerleaders to all out of town games. The profit to the team and the school would make the small sum a good investment.

Adelphi Hears Williams Urge Ticket Sales

It is unfortunate that students must be pressurized into buying University Theater tickets whether they want them or not.

This was the essence of a statement made by Mr. Dallas Williams when he addressed Adelphi unaffiliated women's organization, Tuesday evening.

Williams, director of the Theater, said that most students don't have a genuine interest of the fine arts; therefore ticket purchases should be more voluntary. Williams expressed the hope that someday University students will be able to see, free of charge, the best that can be presented.

Phyllis Johnson was elected to the secretarial office vacated by Madge Matthews, at the business meeting.
