Penn State Holds Big Weight Edge

For the fourth time in as many games, Coach Bill Glassford will send his Huskers against a team that has an overwhelming weight advantage—especially in the backfield.

At the end spots, Nebraska's Ralph Damkroper, who weighs 210, and Bob Schneider, 195, outweigh the Lions' ends John Smidansky and Bob Hicks, who both weigh 190.

Penn State's tackles hold a decided advantage over the Huskers' tackles. Don Murray and Negley put their weight together to tip the scales at 450 pounds—that beef is evenly distributed, they both weigh 225 pounds.

Nebraska's probable starters at tackle, Charlie Toogood and Dick Goeglein, weigh 220 and 202, respectively. Glassford would not be able to match the weight that Bedenk could muster at the tackle spots. Bedenk does not have a tackle that weighs less than 200 pounds, even though his heaviest men are 225.

Paul Kelley, Penn State's nomination for All-American guard honors, weighs 215 pounds and will go against Husker Fred Hawkins, from Omaha, who weighs 187. Joe Drazenovich, playing his fourth year of college ball, is the other Lion guard. He weighs 205, and will probably go against 194 pounder Walt Spellman.

Tom Novak, Nebraska's nomination for All-American honors for center, will have his qualities measured by Chuck Beatty, who is also looking for the same honors. Beatty outweighs Novak by eight pounds. This will be the second time that Novak has gone against an All-American aspirant. The first time was in the Minnesota game when he faced against an All-American aspirant—the Gophers' Tonnemaker.

Anchoring the Penn State backfield is quarterback Chuck Drazenovich. Drazenovich weighs 215 and stands 6'1", which makes him one of the biggest backs in the nation. Rounding out the rest of the Lions' backfield are O'Bara, 170, who, incidentally is the light-

Study Program

In the field of foreign religious journalism Syracuse University School of Journalism is offering two programs of study to train men and women in the techniques of writing and publishing reading material needed abroad.

These programs are being presented on the graduate level. The two-year course is open to graduate foreign and American students and missionaries of all denominations with selected curricula available to each group.

est man in Penn State's lineup; Dougherty, 187; and "Slingin'" Fran Rogel, an even 200.

Nebraska's backfield averages 174½. That gives them a disadvantage of 20 pounds per man.

Glassford has named Bob Schneider, starting end, to captain the Huskers against the Nittany Lions.

Probable lineups.

WAA members, who were eligible to vote last spring, will decide in an election Tuesday, October 18, whether or not they want their Constitution amended.

Barbara Van Every, president of the WAA, gave warning to all members that they must present their identification card to receive their ballot.

A ballot box will be placed in the WAA office Tuesday and members will be able to cast their ballot between 8:00 a. m. and 5:00 p. m.

The soccer baseball schedule for Monday, October 17 is: International House versus Sigma Delta Tau.

The Duck Pin club will meet Wednesday, October 19, in the Grant Memorial. All new and old members are urged to attend.

Bufs Here Saturday for 2-Mile Meet

Nebraska's two-mile track team opens its fall season Saturday morning at 11 a. m., against the University of Colorado in Memorial Stadium, according to track Coach Ed Weir.

Esref Aydin, from Istanbul, Turkey, and Harold Kopf, Lexington, are the only returning lettermen. Kopf will not compete Saturday because of illness.

Besides Aydin, Weir has named Lee Moore, Ken Jacobs, Blaine Runner and Gene Yelkin to run. Gene Robinson has been tabbed an alternate.

George Fitzmorris, an outstanding distance runner in the Big Seven, will lead Colorado's five-man team of Wiley Chance, Milt Wiley, Charles Temple and Larry Clary against the Huskers.

Last week the Bufs lost to a veteran-laden Oklahoma team, 12-25.
