With Tongue In Cheek

By Cub Clem

A friend of mine (don't laugh, I have one) and I journeyed to the Nebraska theater Tuesday night bent on acquiring a little culture from the University Theatre's production of "Faust."

I don't know if I acquired much, but I do know that I enjoyed myself. I was surprised at the quality of the acting. To me, and I'm no drama critic by the way, it seemed professional. All of the three principal characters pleased me very much.

The first act was heavy, being concerned mostly with philosophy. Although I got an 8 out of Philosophy 10, lots of it seemed too bulky for easy consumption. But the advent of sex kept me very interested the rest of the way in. Surprisingly enough, I think some of the philosophy sunk in, too.

After watching "Faust," I think maybe I'll hit the rest of the Theatre's schedule of plays. If they are anywhere near being as good as the first one, they will all be worth the time.

Student Places In Essay Contest

Jack Solomon, University senior, has been named as one of those receiving third place prizes in the third annual Roberts award for editorials on the alcohol problem.

The 1949 entries took a serious bent, with students telling how social pressures thru sororities and fraternities, "fast sets" and other groups, promote drinking by students. Contestants went a step further to suggest means for substituting other pressures to influence students toward games, group activities and non-alcoholic parties as social outlets.

The contest is part of the educational program of the Intercollegiate Association, which has worked in its field since 1900. The National headquarters are at Columbus, O., and the general secretary is Dr. Harry S. Warner.

Ag College Tests Alfalfa Substitute

The University farm department is experimenting with a new legume, lespedeza, which appears to be promising as a substitute for alfalfa or red clover on soils of low fertility.

James Dunlap, manager of the farm department, recently completed harvesting a four-acre plot of seed on the Burlington farm east of Lincoln. He said the seed crop was heavy—about 200 pounds per acre.

Dunlap, who is familiar with the crop in his native state, Missouri, says that feeding tests in the south show that lespedeza is about equal in nutritional value to alfalfa or red clover hay if grown on comparable soil.

The crop on the Burlington farm was planted to bromegrass sod three years ago by Prof. M. L. Baker, associate director of the experiment station. Dunlap said that he believes the crop merits more attention than it has received in the past.

Tassel, Cob Heads Honored By Journal

Two more students at the University of Nebraska were honored in the Lincoln Journal's Weekly Recognition Gallery.

They are Kathryn Rapp, president of the Tassels and Rod Lindwall, president of the Corn Cobs.

The two heads of the women's and men's pep groups at the University were recognized for "contributing to their communities or to society in general."

Both students, by heading their respective organizations, have been working for a bigger and better Homecoming at Nebraska. The rallies, Homecoming activities including the parade, presentation of the Pep Queen, and the dance, are part of the duties and work of the Tassels and Corn Cobs. Maintaining a card section and fostering spirit on the campus were also mentioned.

Miss Rapp is a member of the Mortar Boards and Lindwall a member of the Innocents, senior honoraries.

students at Hangchow University. In 1944 he traveled for a period under the auspices of the WSSF. He worked as general secretary of the Chinese Students' Christian association and with the Committee on Friendly Relations among Foreign Students in New York City. His most recent assignment was with Ginling college in Nanking where he served as director of the office of business administration and associate professor of education.

The speaker knows the plight of Chinese students from personal experience. His own university was bombed at the beginning of the war, and he, like thousands of other Chinese, followed the migration of the university to a new site in the interior. He has had large contact with the mass of refugee students who are uprooted now because of the civil war.
