Nebraska Artists Display Work at Morrill Hall Exhibit

An exhibit of the work of Nebraska artists will be on display in Morrill hall this week. The exhibit is sponsored by the Lincoln Artists' Guild and encompasses every phase of contemporary painting as well as sculpture, ceramics, weaving, and metal and wood craft.

"Over 55 entries were submitted, and 142 were selected by the jury for presentation in the show," said Gerry Dewey, chairman of the exhibition committee. "The large number of entries expresses a very intense enthusiasm throughout the state."

"God's Wish," a large oil painting by Richard Hartley, Lincoln, was recommended by the jury for the purchase award. Each of the four jurors, working independently, came to the same decision about the picture. This was remarkable, considering the fact that there were 142 entries.

Hartley stated that he received his inspiration for "God's Wish" from simply living in Nebraska during the drouth years. The oil typifies a typical Nebraska scene during the drouth. It is sincere in feeling and will appeal to the public at large.

No Formal Art Training

A chemist by profession, Hartley has had no formal art training and this is his first show. He painted the winning entry this summer, working on it in his spare time for about three months.

Outstanding handicraft entries included a collection of hand-wrought silver spoons by W. R. McGeachin, Lincoln and three very expressive puppets made by Marjorie Shanafelt, also of Lincoln.

Mrs. Robert T. Ross, president of the Guild, stated that she was pleased with the quality of work submitted and felt that Gerry Dewey, exhibition chairman, had done a beautiful job of presenting the exhibit.

The jury was composed of Edward Lanning, director of painting at the Kansas City Art Institute; Phyllis Campbell, sculptress of Lexington; Kenneth Clark, architect of Lincoln; and Samuel Waugh, banker of Lincoln.

All-State Fine Arts Alumni To Convene

Alumni of the All-State high school music, speech, or art courses will meet in Parlor A, Union Tuesday, Nov. 8, at 7:15 p. m.

The purpose of the meeting will be to explore the possibilities of establishing an All-State Alumni association of all Nebraska students who attended these courses in their high school days.

Besides furthering relationships of the members, the association has some immediate projects to work on.

This first meeting will determine whether there will be such an organization. Because of this all alumni who can possibly attend should do so, or send word of their interest through someone who will attend.

The All-State course is held on campus every June. At this time outstanding students in the fine arts attend classes conducted by University instructors.

is the Ag E's representative at 7 p. m.
