Then There Are Students . . .

There are students and there are students. First there is the AUF head solicitor. We couldn't help but notice her sincere enthusiasm when one of the campus organizations voted to make the AUF richer to the tune of $100. What was it to her if the AUF had another donation. No money in her pocket. It's just that she showed herself big enough to support a worthy cause.

And then there is the guy with the "don't-give-a-damn" attitude. You've seen him around. He gripes about anything and everything, but this week his particular gripe is that he's bored with hearing about AUF. Well, he bores us, too.

Maybe he just doesn't know a worthwhile project when he sees one. AUF is down in our books as one of the greater campus activities. By greater we mean "great" in the sense of doing our share, "great" in the sense of realizing our responsibility.

Students have two days left in which they can contribute to AUF, two days in which they can show whether they are students . . . or whether they are students.

Susie Reed.

On the Ag Beam

AUF has come to the Ag college. Everywhere on the campus we see signs—"Sacrifice for AUF" or "Give Till It Hurts."

In my mind neither of these signs should be representative of this All University Fund drive. In the first place it shouldn't be a sacrifice to give two dollars for this one big charity drive of the year, and in the second place it won't hurt anyone to give this small amount.

Mary Francis Johnson, head solicitor for Ag, stated that there will be no personal solicitation on Ag except in the organized houses. Any contributions by students not in organized houses must be purely voluntary. This should be a challenge.

The money collected from the University will be divided three ways. The Community Chest, World Student Service fund and the Displaced Persons on our own campus will all benefit. A small quota of $450 has been set for the Ag college. It should be easily doubled.

The Ag college has always been proud of the support it gives to all campus activities and here is a chance to prove it again by putting this AUF drive far over the top.

Friday night there will be a box social in the Ag Activities building. The money from the boxes will be turned over directly to the fund. Here is a chance for you students to have some fun and also boost the drive.

Two booths to take contributions have been set up on the campus. One is in Ag hall and the other is at the Ag Union. Let's all stop at one of these booths and give two dollars or whatever you can afford and make the College of Agriculture the first 100 percent college on the campus.

AUF Donations Reach $1,159.63

Wednesday's contributions raised the AUF totals to $1,159.63. Contributions by students to solicitors, booths, and thru organized houses boosted the fund contributions.

Alpha Tau Omega handed in $30.85; Beta Sigma Psi, $34.50; Sigma Chi, $7.75; Tau Kappa Epsilon, $12, and Towne club, $23.55. Donations totaling $17.38 were received at booths, and $20.60 thru independent student solicitors. Faculty contributions thus far total $20.

The drive, the year's one charity drive, will last until Nov. 14.

"And the next question is, 'Did you give to the Community Chest this year?'"

YM to Show German Film In Library

"Murderers Among Us," a German film with English sub-titles, will be the second YM-sponsored foreign movie of the year.

It will be shown Friday and Saturday nights, Nov. 11 and 12, in Love Library auditorium at 8 o'clock.

Termed "the first German-made film produced amidst the debris of postwar Berlin," the movie stars Ernst Borchert and Hildegard Knef. It was directed by Wolfgang Staudte.

Admission to the picture is fifty cents per person.

The German motion picture is said by Newsweek to "rival the postwar Italian products both in artistry and depth of meaning."

Variety, entertainment world magazine, wrote, "It has a superb camera and montage technique recalling some of the first-rate German productions." New Yorker magazine said the movie is "artistically written and directed and superbly acted."

"Murderers Among Us" is a psychological drama concerning the topical issues of mortality and guilt in post-war Germany—the other side of the story presented in "A Foreign Affair." It primarily conveys the despair and disillusionment of the German people, but it closes on a note of hope for the future. It is one of the few German films to be shown in all four occupation zones of Berlin.

Student Directory Sales to Continue

The sale of student directories, now in process, will continue until the third or fourth week in November, according to Mickey Fike, who is in charge of student sales.

The directories are being sold by receipt. Students give their money to a salesman, are given a receipt, and will later receive their directories. The date when the directories will be available is not yet known.

Any student unable to contact a salesman may go to the Nebraska Builders' office, 308 Student Union, between five and six on Tuesdays and Wednesdays. A representative will be there at that time.

Two persons from each organized house are authorized to sell the directories. They are competing for a $10 prize offered to the person making the most sales.

Washington Offers Scholarships

A new scholarship plan has been announced by the chairman of the scholarship committee at Washington.

The new plan establishes ten four-year national honor scholarships carrying full tuition and additional amounts up to $550. Twenty-five full tuition scholarships are provided and also forty half-tuition scholarships. Scholarships based on certain determining factors will be awarded on a semester to semester basis.
