Upset Hopes Fall; Clark Sidelined

By Kimon Karabaisos
Ron Clark, who leads the Huskers in three categories and is tied for the lead in another, will see only limited action Saturday afternoon against the Iowa State Cyclones.

Coach Bill Glassford announced Thursday night during practice that Clark's injuries, received during the Missouri game two weeks ago, have forced him from practicing this week. It was thought earlier in the week that Clark would be ready to go at full speed Saturday, but his injuries have not responded to treatment.

Clark's injury is the second blow dealt the Huskers' chances of gaining an upset victory over Iowa State within the week. Gerry Ferguson was injured in practice Tuesday night when he was tackled on the last play of the night's scrimmage.

Glassford's main worry now is who will do the punting. Besides Clark and Ferguson, only Frank Nagle has done any punting and that was only once.

These two, despite their injuries, will make the trip. Clark will see limited action while the Scottsbluff fullback will be definitely out.

Replacing Clark at halfback will be Harry Meginnis. Meginnis has been running from Clark's place all week.

His running and pass defense work has been a bright spot in a comparatively "dark" scrimmage for the Huskers.

The probable starting lineup for the Huskers will find Ralph Dammkroger and Bob Schneider at ends, Charley Toogood and "Moon" Mullen at tackles, Art Bauer and Walt Spellman at guards, with Tom Novak at center.

Nagle to Start
In the backfield, Glassford will probably use Fran Nagle at quarterback, Harry Meginnis and Bill "Rocky" Mueller at halfbacks, and Nick Adduci at fullback.

Don Bloom, a 149 pound halfback, and quarterback Ken Fischer are expected to see plenty of action even though they did not draw starting assignments. Fischer will probably start if the Huskers kick.

In his weekly letter to the "Alums," Glassford said, "I am confident that your football team again will show the determination and spirit true to the Cornhusker tradition."

Reports from Ames show that the Huskers will need all the spirit and determination that they can muster.

"That's the game we've just got to win," is the way the Iowa Staters has been referring to their Saturday encounter with Huskers all season.

The Brown Palace is the 1949 ball champion. The boys from 11th and J added this championship to their belt after downing the Presbyterian Student House Wednesday night, 6-0.

The Palacers took command in the second quarter and ruled supreme for the rest of the game. A first quarter Presby flurry carried to the Brown Palace 12 yard line before being stopped. From here the victors drove to the Presby four before bogging down.

Score on Last Play.

A second Palace drive late in the first half carried to the Presby nine and on the last play of the half, Bob Stake took a Mel Williams pass from out of the arms of the defense to score.

The winners threatened once more late in the game, being finally stopped just a foot short of the goal.

Statistics also favored the Brown Palace. The victors completed 12 out of 26 passes as compared to 8 out of 15 for Presby, while they chalked-up seven first downs to four for the losers.

of the last two games with Nebraska. In 1947 when the Huskers took a 14-7 victory at Ames, the Cyclones felt that Nebraska didn't deserve the win because they failed to make a single first down. The Huskers turned two breaks into five yard touchdowns for all their scoring.

I-State Praises NU Coaches
Then, come 1948 when the Cyclones were in Lincoln, Nebraska took a "disputed" 19-15 victory when an alert Huskers recovered a fumble and ran over for a touchdown.

Iowa State press releases state, "Coach Bill Glassford has his squad 'eating raw meat' and... this is the best conditioned Cornhusker team in years," the release continued by praising the Huskers' coaching staff saying, "the 1949 Cornhusker team is the best coached team in years."

Besides the want for revenge, the Cyclones are hoping that they will be able to give Coach Abe Stuber a victory for his birthday, which, incidentally, falls on Saturday. Also celebrating his birthday on that date will be senior Guard Bill Meyers.

Nebraska holds an all-time victory record of 34 won, eight lost, and one tied. Iowa State, stocked with many Navy V-12 students, took three victories in a row, starting in 1943.

Iowa State, starting their season with three straight conference wins, saw their hopes for their first Conference win completely die out as they suffered two losses to Oklahoma and Missouri. The Cyclones are the only team of the original Big Six conference that has not won at least one championship.
