Some Call It 'Luck' . . .

At the University of Nebraska the word "luck" is bandied about a great deal. If your term report comes back with a "4" while the fellow next to you gets an "8", then he is said to "have all the luck." When the course you signed up for as a "snap class" turns out to be more difficult than anticipated, friends sympathize with you over your "tough luck." In fact, there is practically nothing, from sorority bids to bachelor degrees, that isn't determined by luck.

Luck is a wonderful thing in which to believe. It's an amazingly powerful force, as the career of any successful person proves.

Someone seizes an opportunity that others have not realized existed. He sees the possibilities of the situation, has the ambition to desire it, and the courage to tackle it. When he works, he works hard, but not to the exclusion of other worthwhile interests. He intensifies his strong points, bolsters his weak ones, cultivates those personal qualities that cause other men to trust him and cooperate with him.

He is willing to do more than absolutely required to "get by." He finishes what he starts, keeps his standards and goals in sight, and efficiently manages his time. His friends always wonder how he finds time to accomplish all that he does.

He thinks a little straighter, works a little harder, and has a little more nerve and enthusiasm than those around him. He plans his work and then sticks to it, and whatever he does, he manages to excel in eventually. And then—that amazing thing called "luck" does all the rest.—Reprinted in part from the Daily Utah Chronicle.

Editorial Briefs

When the junior class council was organized we looked forward, at long last, to something resembling class unity and class spirit. While the four major classes cooperate and work as units at other universities, Nebraska has never seen its freshmen, sophomores, juniors or seniors organized. And the lack of organization within the classes has meant no organization at all. The junior council is now calling for "junior boosters" to insure the success of the class' first experiment, the Junior-Senior prom. Surely we can count on a ready group of juniors who will rally to the ranks of their class. The success of this first venture may make or break this first attempt at class unity. If the prom goes over, we can count on more and better projects from this pace-setting class, the juniors.

Another class which has come into its own is the sophomores. Admittance of sophomore representatives to the Student Council gives this section of the student body the credit it deserves for the part it plays at Nebraska. Not only will the sophomore class benefit, but the Council itself will take on new life. The sophomores are relative newcomers to the University, and they ought to bring a variety of new and workable ideas to Council meetings. One of the drawbacks to Council efficiency has been that terms are too short to give members adequate experience. By the time they have learned what the Council's task is and what it takes for a smooth-running organization, their terms are up. By adding sophomore representation, two students will have the chance for an extra year of experience. Furthermore, it seems to be the rule that interest in the student government appears only at the junior and senior level. With sophomores on the council, we may expect increased concern among the underclassmen as to what takes place in Council sessions.

The University Theater's and Nebraska Masquers' part in the United Nations program will take shape in the form of "Home of the Brave." Staged in connection with the model UN general assembly, the repeat performance of Arthur Laurent's play will give students another chance to see one of the finest plays to come out of the war. Dealing with brotherhood and tolerance, it will be a fitting prelude to the mock conference. Students will not want to miss this presentation of the play which won the New York Critics Circle Award of 1945-46.

Students at Iowa State college are trying to revive a tradition religiously observed in past years. Any student caught cutting across the campus is promptly captured and thrown into the school's lake. It might be a good idea to build some kind of a puddle on our campus for a similar purpose. At least the puddle would remain intact. Students probably wouldn't walk through it like they do the campus grass. Then again, they probably would.

Probably the most aggravating student in class is the one who takes the liberty of wiping his feet all over your trousers or skirt when he puts them on the plank separating your seat from the one next to it. He never seems to realize what he's doing, because he seldom offers any apology. Seems to us we've heard something about a city-wide courtesy campaign.

The papers have been full of stories recently concerning California university's board of regents' order that professors must sign anti-Communist oaths within 65 days or lose their jobs. The Iowa university Daily Iowan hit the nail on the head by commenting, "The regents of the world's largest university ought to have their collective heads examined." No doubt the Communists in America are enjoying the whole issue since their chief method of doing things is to cause dissension and fights — then step in and take over the leadership.

NEW YORK—Judith Coplon was sentenced to 15 years in prison for plotting to spy for Russia. Her ex-boy friend, Russian Valentin A. Gubitchev, received a 15-year suspended sentence and was ordered deported to the Soviet Union within two weeks.

The deportation order for the 33-year old Russian was recommended by the federal government as a result of conferences between the state department and the attorney general's office.

Miss Coplon received five years on a conspiracy charge and 15 years on a count of attempted espionage, the sentences to run concurrently.

The judge refused an application to release her on bail. Deportation rather than a prison term was decided upon for Gubitchev, to avoid endangering Americans in Soviet-dominated eastern Europe. Gubitchev's claim of diplomatic immunity was not recognized by the state department but the deportation order issued anyway to present Russian retaliation in Europe.

MANCHESTER, N. H.—The much discussed "mercy killing" trial of Dr. Hermann N. Sander ended in acquittal. The spectacular case came to an end one hour and 20 minutes after the jury received it.

The death penalty was ruled out by the judge, who told the jurors they could return on one of three possible verdicts:

- 1. Murder in the first degree.
- 2. Murder in the second degree.
- 3. Acquittal.

Dr. Sander was on trial for first degree murder on charges of injecting air into the veins of cancer-ridden Mrs. Abbie Borrolo.

MOSCOW—Thursday was Vyacheslav N. Molotov's 60th birthday but the time birthday greeting offered food for speculation that Molotov's prestige at the Kremlin was low. Molotov is known throughout the world as the "Crown Prince of Communism."

chemistry. He has been honored with numerous awards and citations for his work in this field.

Speaking about Nebraska's whole UN program, the third conference speaker, Dr. Sorenson, said, "It has always been the plan at the University to assist in every way possible with the development of educational programs concerning the United Nations and its specialized agencies, particularly the work of UNESCO."

For the past three summers Dr. Sorenson has directed special all-University clinics to give students the opportunity to learn about the United Nations and UNESCO and the problems confronting these world organizations. Next summer the clinics will be given over to the following issues: "Can Science Save Us?" "Is the UN Failing?" and "Why Feed the Multitudes?"

Summer Clinics
Each clinic program will be built around a whole leader. Two of these people will come directly from the UN for University clinics. Dr. Sorenson represented the University at UNESCO conferences held in Denver and Cleveland and in a number of UNESCO activities in Nebraska. He is the UN department of public information representatives in Nebraska. Liaison between the UN and Nebraska, Dr. Sorenson is in charge of the voluntary speakers bureau for the United Nations in this state.

"The United Nations," Dr. Sorenson said, "thinks of Nebraska as being a pilot state on education about the UN."

The three speakers will address delegates in the Union ballroom.

Farber's Folly by ajon

Never let it be said that there aren't some on campus who at least try to be different. There are. At the Stan Kenton concert a few weeks back, several of the die-hards from the A.T.O. Lodge decided that the music should be preserved for posterity. With this in mind and armed with an elaborate wire recorder, they journeyed to the session and hid the machine under their seats. All they did then was listen and let the recorder do its work. At the time all went well. But wait—it seems that while the gadget was running, the operators took off to powder their noses or something. Unaware of the existence of the microphones under the seats, a covey of campus lovelies were gabbing about some very interesting items. You'd be amazed what the gals talk about when there are no men around to keep a halter on the situation. Not having listened to the actual recordings, we don't know what the comments were but they were shocking to say the least. Teh, teh, the naughty girls. What we are wondering now is: are you Taus going to keep the little gems or are you going to destroy the recordings of one of the best music and etc., etc., that we've heard for quite some time.

Last week we were proclaiming the approach of wondrous Springtime with its warm weather, cotton dresses and all the other items that go with the change of season. Last Tuesday the blast came. We aren't saying the wind was fast, but when you see students flying to classes you start to wonder. Several large fellas were strolling across 14th and R street about three o'clock in the afternoon when they saw a wee covey approaching them. If she weighed over 95 pounds, it could only be attributed to the fact that she was carrying a copy of the Kinsey Report which, we might add, is a rather ponderous book. Any way, as this girl was coming to the middle of the intersection, a gust of wind caught her and merrily flipped her carcass upon the hood of a car which had stopped for the light. The big strong boys immediately rescued the damsel and carried her shapely frame to the curb. They then set her down, piled rock, bricks and stones in her pockets (they figured she needed more ballast than nature had provided) and sent her on her way. Chivalry is not dead as is shown by this gallant deed.

Lowell Thomas, Jr. to Tell Of 'Out of This World' Trip

Students will hear the inside story of the much publicized journey into Tibet when Lowell Thomas, Jr., presents his motion picture lecture "Out of This World: A Journey to Lhasa" up steep mountains into altitudes higher than any of those in America until they reached the little known city of Lhasa. The color pictures of the forest and of the rhododendrons and wild orchids tend to make the lecture even more interesting.

Interest, however, centers more around the main part of the movie. The color picture shows human existence in the city as they have lived unchanged for centuries. Until 1949 only six Americans had succeeded in their attempts to reach this unheard about mountain kingdom.

War Veteran
At 26, the younger Thomas, is a veteran of the recent war and of the atomic bomb experiments at Bikini atoll. He has previously been on six other expeditions.

The story of their adventures is appearing currently in serialized form in Colliers magazine. The title of the articles is "Out of This World."

Tickets for the Mortar Board sponsored function will go on sale soon at $1.25 per person.

Lowell Thomas, Jr.
March 22 at St. Paul's Methodist church.

In his second transcontinental lecture tour, Thomas will discuss the journey into the forbidden land that he and his father, Lowell Thomas, Sr. took. Their journey received nationwide notice when the elder Thomas received an injury in the hard to reach mountains and it was feared that it would be fatal.
